Our City comment & discussion by THOMAS D. WATSON

The Injunction Proceedings Before the Superior Court of L. A. County

[Photo by Dolberg]

IN our Saturday's issue there appeared an article covering the proceedings started against the city council, endeavoring to enjoin them from paying any more money for the land purchased by them some time ago, namely: 100 acres, known as Glendale-Verdugo park and 33 acres on San Fernando road for airport or water purposes.

The complaint was filed in Judge George W. Crail's court and a temporary restraining order was issued by him.

The case is called for February 23 at 10 a. m.

This case is of unusual interest to Glendale taxpayers as there has been a considerable division of opinion on the purchases.

We would advise the public to withhold judgment on this matter until the hearing is held, bearing in mind that title to the properties in question is held as an asset of Glendale.

If a permanent restraining order is granted Glendale can secure the return of the money expended.

Those of the annexation to Los Angeles group seem to get a lot of satisfaction from this action. We ourselves are of the opinion that this is just one more point against annexation. The city council of Glendale is absolutely subject to the will of the majority of our own voters. What chance would we have against the Los Angeles city council if they did something that was contrary to our interests?

There is no doubt that the purchase of this land is accountable for our increase in taxes this year. Otherwise, our rate would have been lower than that of Hollywood, which seems to be the rate most often quoted by those in favor of annexation.

Should the money paid on the land purchased by the city be returned it can be used in reducing the tax rate for the fiscal year of 1923-1924.

Sections 14 and 15 of Chapter 11, Charter of the City of Glendale, give the city council authority to do this. If the city council carried out the provisions of this section of the charter Glendale would have a tax rate for next year much lower than that of any other locality in this part of the state.

The trouble as we see it with a great many office holders is that after they have been elected to office they lose sight of the fact that they should look to the public for advice before acting on important matters.

We are in receipt of a letter from W. B. Kelly, a prominent Glendale citizen, with the recommendation that the city council appoint a citizens' advisory committee whose duties would be to consult and advise with the city council on all important civic matters, and also recommending that all city officials, including school trustees, should not only live in Glendale but also have their business interests here.

Mr. Kelly also recommends that a complete study of the new amendments to the city charter should be made by a citizens' committee.

All of these recommendations are in order, and should be well received. We have no doubt that the city officials would be more than glad to share some of their responsibilities with citizens who are interested in the city's welfare.

As regards electing Glendale business men as officials of the city, this should be done, for we know that a great deal of the work of carrying on the city's affairs is done during the day time when those whose places of business are in Los Angeles, are unable to be present. As regards school trustees, this is not so important, for their regular meeting night is only once a month. Although at times during the year they meet much oftener, but most always in the evening.

The proposed new charter amendments should be checked over very carefully and if any changes should be made they should be for the better.

CIVICS COMMITTEE MEET

A meeting of the civics committee of the Chamber of Commerce, of which George Karr is chairman, will be held at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Chamber of Commerce. The special subject for consideration will be "Amendments to the City Charter." Anyone having suggestions to make is requested to make them in writing.

CITY ACTORS TO REHEARSE NEW PLAYLET

Fun Revue Is Title of the Musical Comedy to Be Staged

MEETING IS CALLED

Stage of the East Broadway School to Be Used

At the East Broadway School Auditorium this evening at 7:30 the Glendale Community Players will start work on the Fun Revue, a musical comedy in three parts. The brilliant success of the Arabian playlet produced last week at the Glendale Theater has greatly encouraged the players and with much enthusiasm they look forward to rehearsals of the musical comedy. Not until the comedy is a finished piece of work will it be presented.

Every action, every word and intonation, will be gone over and over again; the public may rest assured that the Fun Revue will be as finished and artistic an offering as was the "Hand of the Prophet."

General rehearsals for the entire cast of the Fun Revue will be held every Monday evening at 7:30 sharp on the East Broadway school auditorium stage. Special rehearsals for training in singing and dancing numbers will be held in the home of the director, Nanno Woods, 122 West Milford street, every Wednesday evening at 7:30. To secure active or non-active membership in the Community Players apply to the secretary, Dorothy Morton; the treasurer, L. Bradley, or the director, Nanno Woods.

MASONIC TEMPLE FIVE STORIES HIGH PLANNED

Shrine Club Calls All Orders to Follow It in Building Structure

A five-story Masonic Temple was projected by the leaders of Masonic organizations and thought in Glendale Friday night in the office of William McMillan, 122 West Broadway, called at the request of a committee appointed by the Shrine club, composed of W. E. Evans, chairman, D. J. Hanna, William MacMillan, C. P. Nesselroad and Charles N. Elder.

Representatives attended from the Masonic bodies of the city, the need of a new and enlarged temple was conceded and plans laid for the larger structure. It was planned to house in the structure two chapters of Master Masons, the Commandery, the Shrine club, Order of Eastern Stars, White Shrine and Order of De Molay.

The movement toward a large temple came as the result of the desire of the Shrine club to have a home. It was thought desirable to confine expenditures to Masonic circles.

MAYOR PROCLAIMS FEB. 24 TAG DAY OF WAR MOTHERS

Urges All Citizens to Support Work of the Organization Here

In connection with the tag day that will be put on by the War Mothers of Glendale on Saturday, February 24, for the purpose of raising funds for the carrying on of their work during 1923, Mayor Robinson has issued the following proclamation:

"One of the Glendale organizations which in its own field is unobtrusively doing a most splendid and needed work is the War Mothers.

"In order to raise the necessary funds for their work during the coming year, they plan to put on a Tag Day next Saturday, February 24, under the leadership of Mrs. Nellie Snow Hyer, chairman of the hospital committee, and Mrs. Cowlin, county organizer and chairman of the local relief committee. Volunteers will be organized who will sell tags upon the streets of Glendale on that day at the nominal price of 10 cents. However, I wish to urge upon our patriotic people not to stop at that sum. Let's all make a substantial contribution to this needed work, every penny of which, without any deductions whatsoever for expenses, will go for the welfare work of this organization for the relief of destitute or disabled ex-soldiers.

"Let's show by our contributions on Saturday that Glendale has not forgotten the boys who fought so valiantly for us overseas. Many sad cases are constantly coming to light in Glendale, particularly among boys who were gassed or otherwise partially disabled while serving under the colors in France. Such boys cannot stand heavy manual labor. They have a right to honorable employment at some class of labor which they can perform. I have personally known many of these boys. They are willing to work and all they ask is an opportunity to collect bills, to drive motor cars or do any other light outside work which their physical condition will permit. I wish to urge all employers in Glendale to take the trouble to phone to the American Legion employment committee consisting of Mr. Dru Nicoles at the telephone company's office and City Manager Reeves at the city hall whenever suitable employment of this kind can be had for these boys. Several applications are now on hand.

"Do your bit on Saturday and then keep in mind the needs of these boys for suitable employment during the coming year."

COUNCIL ACTED WITHIN ITS POWER, OFFICIALS DECLARE OF PARK AND AIRPORT BUYS

There Was No Intention to Perform Any Illegal Act, Says City Manager W. H. Reeves and Councilmen

GUIDED BY THE CITY ATTORNEY, IT IS SAID

Dwight Stephenson Declines to Comment on the Action of Annexationists in Bringing Suit; Will Leave it to the Court

That the city council of Glendale was entirely within its legal rights in the purchase of the Glendale-Verdugo park and the 33 acres on the wesetrn side of the city was the substance of general statements of the officials of the city who could be reached this morning, in answer to the injunction suit that has been brought against the council, individually, H. C. Saulsbury, city controller, and City Treasurer J. C. Sherer, by George A. Montgomery, asking that the city be restrained from proceeding with the purchase of the two properties.

Mayor Robinson, in Los Angeles, could not be located. Councilmen Kimlin, Davis and Stephenson spoke for the council and City Manager Reeves from his own point of view.

City Attorney Shaw said he could make no statement since he had not seen the complaint.

There was absolutely no intention on the part of the council to do anything that was illegal or that was not to the best interest of the city, declare these officials, who state further that both of the properties were good buys and are worth every dollar paid for them. There has been absolutely nothing illegal done, so far as the councilmen were concerned, the officials say, with regard to the transferring of money from one fund to another to provide sufficient money for the purchase of the properties, as provision was made in the year's budget for the repayment of every dollar that was borrowed from the different accounts.

So far as the value received for the money in the purchase of Glendale-Verdugo park, several councilmen have stated that more than one offer has been received from outsiders to buy that land for the money that was paid by the city for it.

It is generally claimed by the council that the 33 acres on the western side of the city was purchased for its water-bearing qualities, and that the airport feature was incidental. This has always been the council's contention.

The city does not fear the outcome of the suit, claims City Manager Reeves. The council was instructed in the purchases of these properties by the city attorney, who, Mr. Reeves claims, is one of the most capable municipal lawyers in this part of the state.

"The matter is up to the courts," said Councilman A. H. Lapham, this morning. "If we have done anything illegal it is up to the judge to tell us so. But I cannot see it myself. The city attorney ruled that it was perfectly proper, otherwise the purchases would not have been made. We acted on the advice of the city attorney and believe that we made a good move in purchasing both of the parks. I think it is one of the best things that we have ever done.

"If we do not go ahead and make provisions for parks now, what are the people in the future going to do? This was one of the things that influenced me when we bought the big park. We did not buy the other for aviation grounds but for the water bearing land underneath, and the fact that we could lease it and make it pay for itself was merely a side issue. We figure that inside of ten years the airport will pay for itself."

When interviewed on this matter this morning City Maanger Reeves, said:

"The city doesn't fear the outcome of this suit. The land that was purchased is worth every dollar that was paid for it, and that the transactions were done legally is the contention of City Attorney Shaw. Mr. Shaw is one of the most capable lawyers in Southern California on municipal matters and we for this reason believe the city is safe in this matter.

"The 33 acres were purchased with money from the Public Service department and the land was secured primarily for water bearing purposes. The use of this land for airport purposes is strictly incidental.

"Every dollar that has been spent for the Glendale-Verdugo park has come out of the park and recreation fund. There was not sufficient money in the park fund at the time to make the purchase, so it was borrowed from other funds, but ample provision was made in this year's budget to repay all of that money.

"The city attorney will answer these injunction applications Friday and we are confident he will win out.

"The only thing that puzzles me is that they did not include Patterson avenue park in these injunction suits. That is the biggest lemon in the way of a park that Glendale has ever had. If they had included that park they would have had something to talk about."

Councilman Kimlin, said this morning:

"The city was directed in these matters entirely by City Attorney Shaw, in whose ability in municipal matters we have a great deal of confidence. We believe he was right. So far as these transactions are concerned, we believe the council acted legally in this matter. There was absolutely no thought of putting anything over.

"I was not here when the Glendale-Verdugo park was purchased and therefore, I have nothing to do with that matter, but I was here when the 33 acres of water-bearing land was bought, and I voted in favor of the purchase. The council bought this land, primarily for water bearing purposes.

"A report on this matter will probably be made by the city attorney at tonight's meeting of the council."

"I have absolutely nothing to say," said Councilman Stephenson, "inasmuch as the annexationists saw fit to bring suit and try same through the newspapers. So far as I am concerned the courts are the proper place to try the law. I have nothing to say until the trial of this action."

Councilman Davis had the following to say:

"When the Glendale-Verdugo park was purchased I was not here and had nothing to do with it.

"With regard to the 33 acres I want to say that if the city does not want that piece I'd like to get a slice of it myself.

"I'll wager my money on City Attorney Shaw being right on these matters. I have absolute confidence in him. He knows what he is doing.

"I can make no statement," said City Attorney Shaw this morning, "inasmuch as I have not seen the complaint."

SPECIAL MEETING OF CITY COUNCIL IS CALLED

There will be a special meeting of the Glendale city council at the city hall tonight. The principal business to be transacted will be the deciding as to whether the property owners on Brand boulevard will be assessed to pay for the electricity for the electroliers along that thoroughfare.

MOTORCYCLE MAN IS INJURED BY SPEEDER

Unknown Driver Turns and Drives Officer to Curb

Motorcycle Officer Booth was severely injured at 7:20 o'clock Saturday night when he was forced into the curbing at Kenwood and California by a coupe which he was chasing. The officer was thrown to the street, and his head struck the sidewalk, rendering him unconscious. A short time later he regained consciousness and rode to the city hall, where the incident was reported.

Booth "picked up" the machine on Wilson. It was traveling at a high rate of speed, and without lights. The car turned up Kenwood and Booth followed. He was close behind the car when the intersection of Kenwood and California was reached. The machine made a quick turn down California, forcing Booth to the curbing, where he fell.

Booth reported that he was unable to get the number of the car, but stated that he thought there were three men in the machine.

An auto bearing a description given by Booth was seen later at the Hooper Oil Station. One of the men, the police say, asked for Mr. Larson, who works there. Mr. Larson was out at the time, so the men are reported to have gone away.

The police are still working on the case. Officer Booth was unable to be on duty today, on account of injuries received.

BENMAR HILLS TO BE ZONED CITY

Oliver O. Clark Tells of Big, Modern, Ideal Community

Oliver O. Clark of the Southern California Corporation in charge of the development of Benmar Hills, west of Burbank, outlining the plan said:

"It seemed to us that Burbank possessed an opportunity which will eventually prove priceless, namely—to so direct and control her future development that she shall round it off with perfect balance.

"Every thriving community needs a business section, an industrial section, a civic center, and residential sections, carefully graded as to their restrictions to meet the requirements of every class of people. The problem in community building is to zone these various elements, so that they shall be located to the best advantage of individual property owners and of the city as a whole.

"With a tract like Benmar Hills, this was comparatively easy. It stretches from the San Fernando boulevard up to the foot of the mountains. Along the boulevard obviously was the proper place for the commercial center, with the civic center just to the north and with the industrial section on the other side of the railroad tracks on the north.

"Then beyond the civic center clear to the green Verdugo Hills there are afforded ideal residential locations.

"With those fundamentals of community development provided, it remained then to round out with individual features. Included in the plans, therefore, are sites for a superb country club and golf links, a tourist hotel, public parks, a mountain lake, community playground and athletic grounds, beautiful boulevards, streets and drives, schools, clubs and churches.

"Then fitting into this great plan, a university and conservatories of art and music have been projected, completing the intention to make the model city a world metropolis of culture and education.

"Such is the vision guiding the destinies of Benmar Hills. And there are many steps toward the realization of this wonderful conception that we are in a position to show those who visit Benmar today.

"The city of Burbank has officially received deeds to the 20-acre site for its civic center, whereon it is agreed there will be erected the postoffice, city hall, library and other public buildings. The city has also erected a $250,000 high school on a Benmar Hills location, and chosen another site for a new grammar school. Two churches have also chosen Benmar Hills locations for sites. The development of the tract is being carried on by the Southern California Corporation, whose directors include the following well-known California business and professional men: H. L. Carnahan, who was for many years the corporation commissioner of California; Gavin W. Craig, one of the associate justices of the district court of appeals of California; L. E. Bebymer, who for more than 30 years has managed practically all of the grand operas and big concerts given in Los Angeles; George R. Rogers, who for 30 years was the executive secretary of John D. Rockefeller; Frank L. Meline, one of the largest builders and real estate operators in Los Angeles county; John D. Radcliff, president of the Burbank school board, and one of the leading progressive citizens of Burbank; William H. Thomas, a member of the bond houses of Drake, Riley & Thomas, and T. C. Stevens, a member of the bond firm of Stevens, Page & Sterling.

FRANK'S WANTED

Has anybody seen Frank Salinas?

Frank left his home at 2739 Brooklyn avenue, Los Angeles, yesterday morning in a truck, and he headed toward Glendale. Nothing has been seen of him since, according to a report turned into Glendale police department.

"Once again my orders have been disobeyed," said the public schoolmaster sternly. "Who is the miscreant?" Not a boy answered, and a tragic silence prevailed. "This matter shall be settled once and for all," continued the master in the same icy manner, "and if none will tell, every boy in the class shall be thrashed."

Every boy, therefore, was duly thrashed, but not one would breathe the culprit's name, until suddenly as the last boy was about to receive his share of punishment the cane was withheld.

Fixing a keen look on the lad, the master said, "Now, if you will tell me who committed this indiscretion I will not punish yoh."

"All right, sir; I did it," came the hesitating reply.

A teacher in one of the primary grades of the public school had noticed a striking platonic friendship that existed between Tommy and little Joan, two of her pupils.

Tommy was a bright enough youngster, but he wasn't disposed to follow his studies with much energy, and his teacher said that unless he stirred himself before the end of the year he wouldn't be moved up to a new class.

"You must study harder," she told him, "or you won't pass. How would you like to stay back in this class another year and have little Joan go ahead of you?"

"Oh," said Tommy, "I guess there'll be other little Joans."

EDITORIALS By the PEOPLE

Captain Thomas D. Watson,
Editor Glendale Daily Press.

Dear sir:—I am vitally interested in the continued growth of our beautiful city, and after considerable study am convinced that the following suggestions would harmonize and solve many perplexing problems facing our city:

First—The city council should appoint a citizens' advisory committee composed of not less than five prominent business men, whose duties would be to consult and advise with the city council on all important civic matters.

Second—City officials should be elected that have their business interests in Glendale.

Third—School trustees should be elected that have their business niterests in Glendale.

Fourth—A complete study of new amendments to city charter should be made by a citizens' committee.

These views that I have expressed are aimed at no one, but simply suggestions for civic betterment.

Miss Marcella Webb, well-known teacher of dancing in Glendale, put on a Spanish castanet dance last Saturday evening at a reception given at the Payne Dancing Academy in Los Angeles. Her partner was Mr. Albert L. Van Houtte, an accomplished Spanish dancer, who formerly directed the Spanish dancing in the Mission Play. The number received enthusiastic applause.

WHAT INSANITY IS

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE
Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1923, by The Associated Newspapers)

What is insanity? This is a question which, at first thought, would seem to be readily answerable. But actually its answering is so difficult that even today experts are not wholly agreed in the answers they return, and there is much confusion in the public mind.

Also, at times, when the question is raised in connection with the sanity or insanity of some particular person, the public mind is roused to lively indignation. In England, for example, echoes still are heard of the resentment provoked a few months ago by the reprieving of Ronald True, convicted of an atrocious murder.

At True's trial physicians retained by the crown, as well as others in the employ of the defense, testified unanimously that he was insane. Since the evidence showed, however, that he had a motive for his crime and knew very well what he was doing, the jury found True guilty of first degree murder. His execution would have followed had not the home secretary been so impressed by the findings of a special commission of three alienists as to stay the hanging and send True to an asylum for the criminal insane.

The wrathful protests drawn out by this action might have been both less heated and less numerous were it generally appreciated that a person may clearly understand the nature of his behavior, but be far from sane. And, on the opposite, it is equally true that a person may behave in a most irrational way yet justly lay claim to sanity.

Nobody, for example, could properly regard as evidence of insanity the bizarre behavior of many men while temporarily under the influence of alcohol. If, on the other hand, similar behavior were exhibited by them day in and day out, whether sober or intoxicated, then insanity might well be alleged.

So, too, insanity might well be alleged when, in the absence of any use of alcohol or other intoxicant, there are frequently recurring periods of irrational behavior. In other words, irrationality of behavior is not by itself a decisive sign of insanity. Other factors, notably the time element, have to be taken into account. Or, to give the definition of insanity once proposed by Dr. W. A. White:

"Insanity is a disorder of the mind due to disease of the brain, manifesting itself by a more or less prolonged departure from the individual's usual manner of thinking, feeling and acting."

This definition, it will furthre be noted, emphasizes abnormality in the related spheres of emotion and volition as well as in the sphere of intellect. It suggests that there may be, as experience shows there are, forms of insanity characterized by emotional and volitional rather than intellectual eccentricities.

In such forms it would be entirely possible for a person to be cognizant of the enormity of some particular act—say, murder or suicide—yet because of abnormal weakness of will be unable to restrain himself from committing or attempting to commit that act. Everywhere hospitals for the mentally diseased contain inmates thus afflicted.

They may be intellectually vigorous and keen—I know of at least one who contributes scholarly articles to professional publications—but because of their homicidal or suicidal mania have to be kept under the closest watch. Quite evidently the alienists who examined Ronald True saw reason to conclude that in some degree he was like these other unfortunates, a volitional lunatic.

They may have been in error. It is often most difficult to differentiate between sanity and insanity in cases such as True's. But the home secretary could hardly have done otherwise, in real justcie, than accept their opinions.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK—

By E. R. WAITE,
Secretary Shawnee, Oklahoma, Board of Commerce

THAT newspapers have a forward vision and are usually ahead of their communities.

THAT they are city builders and lead the way for greater progress and development.

THAT they are in the public service and the welfare of their city is first in their minds.

THAT the progress of any city is measured by that of its newspapers.

THAT they can always expand to meet the growing needs of the present day.

THAT they are always a driving force for the commercial and civic betterment of their communities.

THAT they have a powerful influence to make conditions better and they work and toil endlessly to that end.

THAT they are home institutions. They work cooperatively with the home-loving citizens for the public welfare.

THAT they are the greatest lever to create and transmit public opinion.

THAT without them no city could exist.

THAT OCCASIONALLY THEY PICK UP A "HOT BRICK," BUT USUALLY FIND A SAFE PLACE TO SET IT DOWN!

It was Sunday morning, and the conductor, as his 'bus rattled along, was not quite so wide awake as usual. At all events, he didn't observe the small boy who dashed out of a house, shouting, "Hi, there, stop!"

It was only when a passenger had prodded him in the leg that the official became aware of the pursuing boy.

"Stop the 'bus for the boy, conductor," observed the prodder.

The conductor looked disparagingly at the boy, but decided that he had better pull up.

"Now, then, shaver, hop on," he said, when the boy panted up.

"Who are you callin' 'shaver'?" inquired the youth scornfully. "An' what d'you mean by runnin' away from customers? 'Ere, mother wants two a'pennies for this penny. She's goin' to church."

A CALORIE

measures energy as heat, and is the amount of heat required to raise one pound of water four degrees Fahrenheit.

Sawing wood seems to be a popular way of keeping still. Why can't some genius find a way to substitute shaking the furnace?

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

TINCTURE OF DELPHINE

There was undoubtedly something wrong with little Anne's head.

She twisted and wriggled and pulled at her hair ribbon and ran exploring fingers through her hair.

Her father reproved her, and threatened to excuse her from the table.

Her mother said, "Gracious, child! Can't you keep still a minute?" adding, an afterthought, "Do leave your hair ribbon alone instead of pulling at it in that restless fashion."

"My head feels funny," said Anne simply.

Anne had just returned from a week further up the beach at the home of her inseparable friend, Ellen, who was exactly her age and just as full of mischief as Anne was wistful.

"We got caught in the rain one night when we were picking berries in the mountain and Ellen's mother was awful cross because her father stayed too, and let us sleep all night in a trapper's cabin. It was fun. We slept in a bunk with gray blankets, and Ellen's father slept on the ground outside beside the fire and watched for wild beasts."

"Awfully, not 'awful,' my child," said her mother.

Then, as Anne again reached a hand toward her thick curls, her mother regarded her with sudden suspicion.

"You slept in a filthy bunk in a trapper's cabin, between grey blankets? No wonder Ellen's mother was cross. And no wonder your head feels funny," she wailed. Catching Anne by the hand she almost dragged her away from the tea table and flew upstairs.

Tying a towel around the child's neck, Anne's mother proceeded to fine comb her head.

Her father appeared at the door. "Not—?" he gasped.

"Of course! Think of her sleeping between filthy grey blankets!"

Anne looked interested. Her mother appeared to be on the verge of tears, but she plied the fine tooth comb industriously.

"Please go down to the drug store and get a bottle of tincture of delphine," said Anne's mother.

"Tincture of what?" asked Anne's father.

"Delphine! Larkspur! It's the same thing. And hurry!"

Upon his return Anne's mother saturated a towel with tincture of delphine and wrapped Anne's head in it. At the end of an hour she removed the towel and washed the child's hair with warm water and pure soap. Then she washed it in hot vinegar to destroy further signs of pediculi.

The hair was then dried and tincture of delphine rubbed into the scalp and hair. After which it was braided. A towel was then pinned around the head.

This treatment is most satisfactory when followed carefully. It will remove all traces of pediculi from a little girl's head very quickly. Applications of delphine should be made each day and the hair thoroughly washed and brushed.

WE WOMEN

By BETTY BRAINERD

GOOD GRACIOUS!!!

"I stand pat on my opinion of woman," says Arnold Bennett. "I am not hostile to her. She is harming and interesting but good for nothing. The Anglo-Saxon type of dominant woman conditions the world by her weaknesses. Take her, for instance, at the pleasure resorts in Europe. She has beauty, health, a rich husband or a big estate to exploit. She comes of a good family as a rule. Her vagaries amaze the continental Europeans. Superficial aspects commend her. She gabbles of art, politics, literature, religion. She dresses exquisitely, dances divinely, walks with grace, is capricious, luxurious, out of touch with reality. She is fascinating as a spectacle—that is all."

* * *

I stand pat on my opinion of Arnold Bennett. I am not hostile to him. Superficial aspects commend him. The characters in his books gabble of art, politics, literature, religion. He is fascinating as a writer. He conditions the writing world by his weakness. He knows nothing of women. I stand pat on my opinion of Arnold Bennett. He is a rhetorical spectacle—that is all.

Mr. Bennett once wrote a little book in which he told the world or that considerable part of the world which reads him, "How to Live on Twenty-four Hours a Day." As a sister piece he wrote another book in which he shared the secrets of "Mental Efficiency," with those who would buy his book for a price.

Mr. Bennett is not lacking in mental efficiency. Nor are George Bernard Shaw, George Jean Nathan and H. L. Mencken, all of whom possess genius to a high degree of self-advertising.

Mr. Shaw, of course, has proved his ability as a rhetorical acrobat. He has done flip-flops, tumblesets and summersaults before the reading public of two continents. He is most interesting, however, when he stands on his head. In such a position it is amusing to watch his face grow red as the blood rushes to his head and epigrams flow from him in a constant stream.

But it is surprising to find Mr. Bennett in such a position. It scarcely becomes him. I can account for it only by the conclusion that he has found nourishment in "Mental Efficiency." He seems to have thrived on the diet which he prescribed for himself. His novels have not been as consistently successful in recent years as they were in the past. Perhaps he acquired advertising. The perfect way, of course, would be to denounce women. Straightway chivalrous gentlemen of the world over would rush to print in their defense; women would take their pens in hand and write indignant letters to the editors of their newspapers—and Mr. Bennett would again become a prominent figure on the face of modern literature by virtue of the advertising campaign.

* * *

I am not sure I shall enjoy another book of Mr. Bennett. He flatters me when he says I am fascinating as a spectacle. But he also says I am good for nothing. He discourages me. He says I am out of touch with reality. Presumably his books deal with the real. I shall make good his statement. I shall remain out of touch with the real so far as his future books deal with it.

* * *

But I stand pat on my opinion of Arnold Bennett.

COTTON TENTS AND HEAT

The United States Bureau of Standards is conducting an investigation to discover a roofing material that will keep the inside of a balloon hangar at a minimum temperature when exposed to the sun. It was shown that the most effective means of accomplishing this is the covering of the outside of the roof with a highly reflecting substance, such as white paint or asbestos, and painting the inside of the roof with aluminum paint.

During October the bureau made a similar study of white cotton cloth, the kind used in tents.

If you have ever camped out in a tent you will verify the statement that when the sun beat down on your canvas the inside of your vacation home became insufferably hot. The Bureau of Standards tells us that this heat was caused by the sunlight that was "diffusely transmitted through the cloth, and in particular as a result of the heat rays emitted by the cloth."

The bureau goes on to say that by covering the inside of the cloth with aluminum paint it was found that the heat radiation into the interior of the tent could be greatly reduced. For example, it was found "that the radiation from the back side of a sample of No. 10 duck was reduced 86 per cent. by painting the inside with aluminum paint."

The bureau asserts that if the paint is on the outside the arrangement is less efficient, the radiation into the interior being reduced only 78 per cent.

A coating of aluminum paint applied to the inside of No. 4 duck, which is too heavy for a tent, reduced the heat radiation from 78 to 81 per cent.

If anybody is dying to have you reform him you can bet that the job isn't worth while.

MORE SPEED SOUGHT FOR SCOUT DRIVE

Kiwanis Hears Progress Is Slow and Must Be Pushed

NEED MORE SUPPORT

County Director Declares Strenuous Effort Must Be Made

BY W. L. TAYLOR

The Glendale Kiwanis Club had the pleasure Friday at its noon luncheon of entertaining many members of the Rotary and Exchange clubs, whose main purpose for meeting with the Kiwanis was to check up results on the Boy Scouts' drive. Teams from all the clubs reported very slow progress in securing funds for this movement, which should have the hearty support of everyone.

Various members of the organizations made short talks, after which Mr. Pollard, who has charge of the county work, made a pointed address. He said that the results in getting in subscriptions were far from satisfactory, and that a reorganization of the forces must be effected, and a strenuous effort put forth to raise Glendale's quota. A. R. Eastman, local executive of the Boy Scouts, emphasized the importance of the work, and said that he did not believe in resorting to any "strong arm" methods to raise the money, that subscriptions should come freely and voluntarily. Mr. Eastman made it clear that Glendale must go over the top in this drive and that the importance of the boy scout work is second to none just now. People, he said, should consider it an honor and a great privilege to be able to contribute to an organization whose sole purpose is the making of good men out of boys. President A. L. Ferguson called for volunteer salesmen and about a dozen arose and signified their willingness to solicit funds. The drive will start again on Tuesday morning and it is hoped that there will be a liberal response from everyone solicited.

Through the courtesy of Frank Echols the club was entertained by Dana Walden, a member of the Los Angeles Magicians' Club. Mr. Walden put on several exceptionally clever tricks, and demonstrated beyond a doubt that the hand is quicker than the eye if you understand how and when to use your hands. His program was very much enjoyed.

Gene Gordon, the popular dry goods man, added a great deal to the merriment of the occasion by contributing the silent boost in the form of miniature balloons, which carried his advertising. Instead of using voices or hands for applause the balloons served the purpose.

There were two attendance prizes. Goode & Belew announced they would give an order each week for a suit to be cleaned or pressed as an attendance prize. Mr. Thomas of the Pacific-Southwest Bank, won the first order. Sid Brown also gave a case of his ginger ale as a second attendance prize, and Mr. Hoyt of the Dixon Sash & Door company won the beverage. The attendance prizes in the future promise to be great incentives.

The lady who was so generously assisted by the club last week thanked the members through Ed N. Radke, who solicited the contribution. She stated that it came in a time when she was in dire need of assistance. A letter was received from Kiwanis members in Astoria thanking the club for its donation of $50.

Following it's annual custom the Kiwanis Club members contributed 25 cents each in honor of the new son who arrived recently at the home of Jesse Smith. The young lady will have a nice little sum to remember the club by, and Mrs. Smith will know that there is indeed something about the Kiwanis spirit that is good.

The matter of advertising Glendale with auto name plates was discussed and it was stated that one firm in town had purchased 1000 auto name plates to be distributed free. Jesse Smith, in speaking of this as a good advertising feature, stated that he would give each automobile owner of the various clubs a name plate free.

An unusually good number of members were in attendance and a fine dinner was served by the Glenn Inn.

Day of Prayer Proves Profitable

The "day of prayer" held by the combined missionary societies of Glendale at the Baptist church Friday, was felt to be profitable to all participants, about 50 being present at the afternoon session.

The Baptist ladies had the first hour from 10 to 11, and were followed by the Presbyterian ladies, Rev. Ogden, a returned missionary from India making a very fine address.

During the luncheon hour ladies of the Baptist church served tea and coffee.

At the afternoon session ladies of the Christian church had the first hour, and Miss Garton, sister-in-law of Rev. Clifford Cole, spoke on some phases of the work in India. Miss Rowe talked on the work of the Japanese Institute in Los Angeles.

During the hour reserved for the Methodist societies, Mrs. Collins reviewed the book, "Building in India," and Mrs. Munson spoke on work in Java. The last hour of the session had been reserved for the W. C. T. U., a part of which was spent in prayer for the work.

NEW NETHERLANDS

was the name of the Dutch colony now New York. There were fortified trading posts at New Amsterdam (New York), and at Fort Orange (near Albany). Tracts of land were offered along the Hudson to rich proprietors ("patroons"). These tracts were eight miles deep and were controlled in a feudal manner by their owners. The population of New Amsterdam was about 1600.

FIRST POSED PHOTOGRAPH OF YORK AND FIANCEE

Duke of York & Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon

This is the first posed photograph of the Duke of York, second son of the British rulers, and his fiancee, Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, to reach America. It was made in London shortly after the announcement of their engagement. The marriage, it is thought, will take place in April.

Marshall Neilan has again proved himself a master craftsman in his motion picture version of Donn Bryne's great novel concerning an American shipyard, "The Strangers' Banquet," made in association with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. It was seen for the first time in Glendale at the Glendale Theatre last night. In point of magnitude this is certainly Mr. Neilan's greatest production and it ranks among the country's finest photoplays. In dramatic intensity, in the thrill of action, the appeal of young love and the spirit of reality it has seldom been equalled. It is not merely a screen entertainment, but is great drama magnificently depicted.

The story is told against a background of shipyards and the romance of building great ships destined to ply the seven seas. Old Shane Butler Keogh, acted beautifully by Hobart Bosworth) has made a fortune out of his shipyards and leaves his millions and his business to his son John (Nigel Barrie) and his daughter Derith (Claire Windsor). At once the strangers who hope to banquet on this golden feast began to gather. John marries one of them, Jean McPherson, a woman of doubtful past, acted by Eleanor Boardman. Derith is loved by Angus Campbell superintendent of the yards and son of her father's old friend, but her lax policy of controlling the men causes him to resign. Derith proceeds to New York to plunge into a whirl of gayety. She vainly tries to bring herself to marry Comte Epernay, but when Angus arrives with news of a strike and rioting at the shipyard, she returns with him. There are many thrills in the picture, emotional climaxes that moisten the eye, and an unforced strain of comedy. It is a great picture, perfectly acted by Claire Windsor, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Hobart Bosworth, Nigel Barrie, Stuart Holmes, Claude Gillingwater, Eleanor Boardamn, Thomas Holding and a score more. Mr. Neilan has surpassed himself.

REV. KEITH BROOKS TELLS OF THE THESSALONIANS

Rev. Keith Brooks spoke in part as follows yesterday at the meeting of the Men's Bible Class at the City Hall:

The closing section of the fourth chapter of first Thessalonians, which we were considering last Sunday, described the manner of the Lord's personal and visible return, which is to take place at the close of this present age. The fifth chapter continues the subject of the second coming of Christ and opens with the words, "Of the times and seasons ye have no need that I write unto you, for ye know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night."

The second coming of Christ is intended to be the pole-star of the church. The time of it is nowhere revealed, that Christians might ever be living and laboring in this purifying hope. The apostle plainly hints that he had nothing to reveal as to the period of time to expire, or any particular crisis in time. They were to grasp the main fact of Christ's return in such a time as should please the Father and leave the time entirely to Him. It is strange that there has been so much of time-setting. Jesus Himself says in Acts 1:7: "For it is not for you to know the times or the seasons which the Father hath put in His own power." Evidently the knowledge of the time is outside the province of human thought, yet speculations of this kind have been repeatedly ventured on and invariably they have proved worthless. Someone has always come forth with mathematical calculations supposedly based upon the Scripture, to prove that Christ will come at a certain time. Long ago Chrysostom said, "Our nature is greedy for knowledge of things invisible. This comes of our conceit of having nothing to do. Often is the mind in haste to learn and understand the things before the time." Surely no one can afford to be dogmatic in this matter of which the Bible says men know the least. In Mark 13:32 we find that the person who knows the time of Christ's coming knows more than the angels of heaven. The uncertainty of the time has been the perpetual stimulant of the people of God. The only thing certain about the second coming is that it is as sure to take place as was the first advent.

The second verse might be rendered, "You already know precisely that nothing precise as to the time can be known. That it will steal upon the world when it is least expected, even as a thief in the night." Some do not like this metaphor of the thief. Its object however, is not to suggest the evil purpose of a thief but the unexpectedness of Christ's coming. A thief does not notify one as to the time he is coming. So, the apostle declares, it will be with the second advent. Saved people are supposed to be always ready to go, and so cannot be taken unawares. Their security does not lie in expectations based upon mathematical calculations but in living unto God day by day.

"When they shall say, Peace and safety! then sudden destruction cometh upon them." The pitifulness of it is that those who are unprepared to meet God in that day will be confirmed in their confident security, saying, "Peace, peace," where there is no peace. There are many today who have this peace of a blunted conscience, whose eyes are blind to real conditions in the world that are fulfilling Scripture rapidly. Not only will these unbelievers be saying, "Peace, peace," but Peter tells us (2 Pet. 3:4, 7) that some will be saying, "Where is the promise of His coming? For since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were." Mt. 24:48-51 tells us that some will be saying, "The Lord delayeth His coming." In Mt. 24:23 we read that some will even insist that Christ is already here and that He is not coming in outward manner as He said. The Scripture tells us what all of these people will have to say when Jesus really does come. They will cry out, "Lord, Lord, open to us," but He will answer, "Verily I say unto you, I never knew you."

Of the true Christians the apostle adds: "Ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are the children of the light and the children of the day." To the unsaved, by a sad contradiction, the "day of the Lord" will be night. For the sons of light it will be day, indeed. The children of light do not have to struggle with the conflicting systems of philosophy, nor are they the slaves of public opinion. The light of God shines upon their pathway. Everything necessary for them is found in the revelation of God's Word and in the person of God's Son.

"Therefore, let us not sleep, as do others, but let us watch and be sober." Even the Christian is not beyond the need of watchfulness. There is no spiritual experience that can warrant self-confidence. There is no specific that can make a Christian entirely immune from sin. Ye must be watchful against the adversary to the very end. There is a story about how the devil once held an anniversary and his emissaries report results. "I let loose wild beasts upon the missionaries," said one, "and their bones are now bleaching on the sand." "What of it?" said the devil, "their reward is all the greater." Then said another, "I drove the east wind against a ship loaded with Christians and they are all in the bottom of the sea." "What of it?" said the devil. "They were all saved." Then said a third, "For ten years I have tried to get a single Christian to sleep. I have succeeded and left him so. He sleeps while others go on in their way to ruin," and all the devil's emissaries clapped their hands for joy because a Christian was found asleep.

BLIND UNIVERSITY STUDENT WINS HONORS BECAUSE HIS MOTHER ACTS AS HIS "EYES"

Blind from birth, George W. Weinmann, 23 years old, has made an unusual record at Northwestern university, Evanston, Ill. He has just completed his third year and already has been awarded two important prizes. He attributes his success to his mother, Mrs. Bertha Weinmann, who has been constantly with him to serve as his "eyes." Mother and son are shown here.

Legal Boxing Now in the Balance

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Boxing all over the country in a large part depends on what happens to the sport in New York. If the present period of unrest results in repeal of the Walker law, as has been threatened, it will mean simply that boxing cannot and will not be a nice game. If the Walker law cannot make a decent sport of it, it is not a sport and it should not be conducted as such.

The Walker law represents the thought and deliberation of wise and experienced minds. It covers every technical ground as no previous law ever has done. It controls everything but the greed of boxers, managers and promoters, and that is impossible to control.

After some sad experience with Battling Siki, the French Boxing Federation said the sport needed closer supervision in Paris, and that they were going to follow the lead of the New York boxing commission. New York is looked up to the same way in this country and if the game dies here, a lot of boxers will have to look around for some other line of business, as there will be little doing in the ring any place.

* * * * * * *

William Muldoon, chairman of the New York commission, has made some mistakes. Some of his rulings have been the cause of mirth and ridicule, but he didn't make any mistake when he issued the edict that a boxer committing a foul would not be entitled to collect his purse. There has been only one foul committed since that edict.

Two members of the American Olympic team for 1924 have already been announced. Joie Ray and Bob McAlister have announced themselves as members of the track and field delegation that Uncle Sam will send to Paris. The boys are confident, if nothing else. But the nice part about it is the committee to pick the team will agree with them.

FREDDIE WELSH AND MAN HE TAUGHT TO BOX 20 YEARS AGO GOING ABROAD TO SEEK TITL

Like all one-time champions, Freddie Welsh believes he can co back. Among those who share his conviction is Humbert J. Fuga Twenty years ago Welsh was an instructor in a gymnasium in N York's Wall street district. Fugazy's father, the oldest Italian bank in New York, sent his son to that gymnasium. The youth, who lat became the lightweight champion of the world, taught the young Fugazy how to box and when Welsh later won fame in the ring, Fuga always made it a point to see him fight. On several occasions he cross the continent. Now Fugazy and Welsh are going to England togeth convinced that Freddie will win the championship over there. Th they believe, will be a stepping stone to a return match with Ben Leonard, who took from Welsh his world's title. Fugazy and Welsh a shown above, Welsh in the uniform he wore as a captain during t world war.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS,
President American Society for Thrift.

ALMOST any business man will tell you that it is the little leaks that constitute the great dangers of a business. "Genius is an infinite capacity for taking pains," wrote the poet Goethe. Failure often comes through unwillingness or incapacity to eliminate small instances of waste.

S. W. STRAUS

There is a value in thoroughness that is above computation, and this applies alike to the affairs of the individual as well as to a business concern.

The successful executive so builds his organization that leaks and lost motion will be done away with to the greatest possible extent. It is true, of course, that men fail many times because they try to carry too many details, but this does not mean that such details are not worthy of attention. The fault in these cases lies in inadequate direction.

The man who is at the head of a great business cannot attend to all the details of that business, excepting indirectly through his various executives. But these small details must be looked after adequately or there will be no success.

Thoroughness is an essential of business development. And thoroughness also is just as necessary to individual success and attainment.

There is need not only of watchfulness in financial matters but in every other phase and activity in life. If, for example, one is thrifty in matters of money, but is neglectful of one's health, or does not keep up with the spirit of the times in which we live, or develops habits of selfishness, there will be no great success.

To be truly thrifty one must be thorough. And thoroughness means taking pains in all essentials.

Lots of bright hope is exchanged for gloomy experience.

A brilliant young gentleman e ployed in an English governme office had developed the art of riving there late. He had be warned time after time by the he of his department. Every we this crusted official examined t book in which the clerks register their time of arrival, but our frie showed no improvement. One d the late arrival realized that was up against a crisis. Wh could he do with the timeboo There was not much time to was

The Right to Advertise

By FESTUS J. WADE
President Mercantile Trust Co. of St. Louis

I repeat I am prejudiced in favor of advertising. But I am not guessing. I have seen what it has been able to do.

Advertising is almost as necessary to the bank, particularly the one offering a diversified service, as it is to the department store.

It is a powerful force, and no one deserving the right to apply it to his business should be denied that right.

'RIGHT VS. MIGHT' SERMON THEME OF REV. PETERS

He Preaches at Christian Church; Rev. Cole Begine Home Life Series in Evening

Rev. Harry H. Peters, of Bloomington, Ill., field secretary of the Christian churches of the prairie state, who is in Glendale for a visit of several weeks with relatives, preached for Rev. C. A. Cole at Central Christian church yesterday morning from the text, "Be not overcome of evil but overcome evil with good." The speaker said, among other things: "The forces of might and right were represented 2000 years ago by two great characters, Julius and Jesus. Julius Caesar was the culminating representative of the forces of might, as exercised by the Roman empire in its nearly 1200 years of domination. He brought to perfection this mighty aggregation of man power and war machinery. A few years after to his death at the hands of assassins there was born in a lowly manger in Bethlehem, just outside the walls of Jerusalem, a baby boy, whose coming was heralded by angels and rejoiced over by wise men. His parents soon fled with Him to Egypt, that land of mystery, in fulfilment of prophecy, and on their return settled down in Nazareth, the little outlaw town of Galilee. Of humblest birth and growing up among meanest surroundings, He yet became the greatest figure of history, the exponent of love to all men. Caesar and the great Napoleon, whom I hold to be the dominant force of the militaristic idea, conquered by supplanting, as he said, while Christ won all by love. What a contrast between Paul, the great apostle, and Napoleon, the conquerer! The one spent his last days in prison, cheered by the faithful friends whom he had led to salvation, the other ended his life on lonely St. Helena, railing at fate, doomed to everlasting woe. The one wielded the sword of love and righteousness, the other that of metal and might.

Today these same forces are battling for control of the world, but love has gained on might. With the recent downfall of the nation that lived for militarism, the reign of love has gained the ascendency and will yet conquer, dark as the outlook may be at times.

"'As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.' As a nation thinks, so is it. Germany, for a generation, thought war, lived war and trained for war. So in due time war was forced upon the world. If the nations of the world will all think peace, talk peace and act peace, war will be done away with. The world will be tomorrow what today's ideals point to."

At the evening service Rev. Cole preached the first of a series of four Sunday night sermons on "Home Life." He read extracts from letters submitted to him anonymously by twenty-two women on the virtues and faults of their husbands. From these it appeared that there are several almost ideal husbands among the membership and a few that need reforming. Some of the communications were in rhyme and quite witty. Some pointed lessons were drawn by the pastor from these frank statements and some good advice was given both husbands and wives.

Next Sunday night the husbands will tell on their wives and considerable interest is manifested in the forthcoming statements.

MOTHER OF OPERA STAR LISTENING AT HOME BY RADIO AS DAUGHTER SINGS FROM THE SKY

Miss Cyrena Van Gordon of the Chicago Opera company is one song bird who can really fly. Not as an airplane passenger, but as a pilot, for she studied aviation under Ruth Law and Ethel Dare. During a recent flight at Mineola, Long Island, Miss Van Gordon sang an aria which her mother, Mrs. Emma Pocock, heard while sitting in her home at Camden, Ohio. The photographs show Mrs. Pocock listening to her daughter's voice and Miss Van Gordon when she alighted after the flight.

GEORGE RIPPER HAS BIG CROWD AT LECTURE

To an interested audience at the Chamber of Commerce hall Sunday evening George Ripper, well-known Bible scholar, quoted the bible to show that earth's great jubilee is at hand. He based his remarks on Leviticus, 25:10: "Proclaim liberty through all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof. It is a Jubilee unto you——." He said in part:

"It is only when we recognize the typical character of God's dealings with the nation of Israel that we can rightly understand why their history, in preferance to that of all other nations, is so particularly recorded by the prophets. In the nation of Israel God has given striking illustrations of His great plans for the world.

"Every fiftieth year, counting from the time of their entrance into Canaan (year 1575 B. C. Leviticus 25:1-12) was to Israel a year of Jubilee, a time of rejoicing and restitution, in which broken families were re-united and lost homesteads restored. This Jubilee year was a type. It was intended to foreshadow the great restitution, the recovery of mankind from the fall, the re-uniting of families separated by death, the restoration and perfection of the earth for man's everlasting home, the giving of happiness and granting of life eternal to all the families of the earth, to be accomplished in the millennial age. No wonder it was called a jubilee.

"The world now is passing through a great time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation. It is the Lord's way of cleaning the earth, of destroying institutions and organizations that oppose or otherwise obstruct the full establishment of His Kingdom—Earth's Great Jubilee. The Scriptures clearly show that this great Kingdom, this time of peace, of happiness, of prosperity, of life, will immediately follow the present trouble.

"The exact time for the beginning of this great jubilee is marvelously shown in the picture. Many Scriptures show that there were to be seventy jubilees kept. (Jeremiah 25:11.) A simple calculation of the jubilees brings us to this important fact: Seventy jubilees of fifty years each would be a total of 3500 years. That period of time beginning 1575 years before A. D. 1 of necessity would end in the fall of the year 1925, at which time the type ends and the great antitype must begin. What then should be expected to take place? In the type there must be a full restoration, therefore the great antitype must mark the beginning of restoration of all things. The chief thing to be restored is the human race to life. Since other Scriptures definitely fix the fact that there will be a resurrection of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and other faithful ones of old, and that these will have the first favor, we may expect 1925 to witness the beginning of the return of these faithful men of Israel from the condition of death, being resurrected and fully restored to perfect humanity and made the visible, legal representatives of the new order of things on earth.

"'Messiah's kingdom once established, Jesus and his glorified church, constituting the great Messiah, shall minister the blessings to the people they have so long desired and hoped for and prayed might come. And when that time comes there will be peace and not war, as the prophet beautifully states: 'In the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow into it. And many nations shall come, and say, Come and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for the law shall go forth out of Zion, and th word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks; nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it.'—Micah, 4:1-4."

Next Sunday evening in the same hall, James Cullen Watt of Toronto, Canada, will speak. His subject will be "The Government of Earth's New King." This lecture, as former ones, will be entirely free and no collection will be taken.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Godfrey of 325 North Orange street spent Friday as guests of former Michigan friends at the Dresden apartments, Los Angeles.

C. E. DISTICT CONVENTION ELECTION

New Officers Are Marie Moyer, Gordon Mize, Mary McDill and John Server

At the Christian Endeavor district convention held at the Christian church Sunday afternoon, officers were elected as follows: President, Marie Mayer; vice-president, Gordon Mize, secretary Mary McDill; treasurer, John Server.

As heads of departments the following were named: Superintendent of quiet hour, Laura Bonnell of Eagle Rock; tenth legion superintendent, Tom Ernhardt of Burbank; social superintendent, Nell Leggitt of Glendale; superintendent of Missions, Lois Mock; superintendent of publicity, Harry Marple.

A fine address was made by Dr. James F. Winnard, pastor of the Tropico Presbyterian church, on "What Conventions Should Mean to Us," in which he brought out the points of service, putting into the convention what one gets out of it and bringing back the inspiration to one's own society.

The convention adjourned to separate meeting of the Young People's Society and the Intermediates, the first named being led by Miss Ethel Preston, and the Intermediates by Elizabeth Smith of Burbank.

Officers were then installed by Rev. Stevenson of Burbank, and a luncheon was served during a semi-social half-hour.

LUTHERAN PASTOR PREACHES VIVID SERMON

Sunday morning Rev. H. O. Kringel preached at the services of the Evangelical Lutheran church of the Missouri Synod. A fine audience was present to hear the sermon based on Matthew 11:28—"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Following the pastor's vivid description of the manner in which Christ asked all to come to Him for rest, he then portrayed the fervent and sacred love of Christ toward those who reject Him. He said in part: "Christ loves the sinner, but He hates sin. Every sin is an abomination in His sight. Not for this reason does Christ love the evil-doer, because he despises and rejects his Lord and Savior and turns his back on Him and does not want to be saved; no, but because he has an immortal soul which is capable of eternal salvation and which Jesus longs to save. Indeed His love to those who reject Him would not be a true love if it were not a sacred love. Why does the Lord follow those people who reject Him? His object is to turn them from their wickedness and to induce them to seek the Lord their God, that is, to repent of their sins and to accept and believe in Christ as the only way into salvation."

LENTEN THOUGHTS GIVEN BY DR. FUNK

Touching on the subject of "A Lenten Meditation," Dr. Funk said, "Fret not thyself," for there is no need of it. Our God has not gone off on a journey; neither has He fallen asleep and left us to be consumed by the fires of lust and the appalling wickedness of man; but high above the storm, and far o'er the mighty deep, there sits enthroned in royal majesty, our Creator. And shall not He who created the heavens and the earth; who made the sun to rule by day, and the moon and the stars to shine by night; shall not He who created every living thing, and who created man in His own image, also have dominion over them?

"Fret not thyself," but "commit thy way unto the Lord." Trust God, go about doing good and verily thou shalt be fed. Man's extremity is but God's opportunity. When we can see nothing but failurs, God may yet see success. "She hath done what she could" is a beautiful tribute. But, are we doing the best we can? In a certain textile factory the instructions were: "If your threads get tanglied, send for the foreman." One very busy woman got her threads tangled and tried to undo the tangle herself. But it only got worse and worse. Then she sent for the foreman and said, "I was doing the best I could." "No," said he, "the best you could do would be to send for me." Better subscribe to the Lord's plan and commit thy way to Him.

REV. BARR PREACHES ON 'CHURCH IN HER INCIPIENCY'

The pastor chose for his text: Gen. 22:18: "And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed."

His subject was, "The Church in Her Incipiency." He spoke as follows: "Two Sundays past I talked on 'The Faith of our Fathers,' last Sunday on 'The Faith of the Sons of God' You remember that on last Sunday I tried to show the relation of sonship, how that one may be a follower or disciple of Christ; that is, he may accept Christ as an example in faith and practice, and yet not experiance that sonship with the Father or fill that place of brother with the elder brother, Jesus Christ; how that the earthly son of an earthly father was more than a servant, yea more than a disciple or follower of a parent, for he was bought with a price; he came through the very blood of the parent, was born of the parent, became heir with him of all the parent possessed; shared with him, in partnership with the Father and had in common the Father's possessions. Then how become the sons of the Heavenly Father? We must be born again, and in this new birth, our being born of the Spirit, we are one with Him in Christian unity—'His Spirit bearing witness with our Spirit that we are the children of God.'

"Today we are to study the church in her incipiency; that is, to know the 'faith of our Father's,' and the 'faith of the Sons,' were coincident to our becoming heirs of the kingdom, which Abraham of the Old Testament and Jesus Christ of the New Testament were founding.

"God had to first find men like Moses and Abraham, yea men of faith, before He could establish His people whom He had created after His own likeness and made in His own image.

"Now to complete His plans for His people. He must begin with the faith of the prophets. These prophets must prove to kings and princes and powers and governments and nations and individuals that God was Himself 'Lord of Lords and King of Kings.'

"Yea, by the handwriting on the wall old Belshazzar must answer to and bow before God; God must walk with the three Hebrew children in the fiery furnace and convince those in authority that God Himself had power over flames of fire of the very highest heating intensity, that He even controlled fire at His own bidding when he caused fire to fall from heaven and consume the altar of wood and lick up the water in the trenches thereabout, that he might prove to the worshipers of Baal' that He was God, and to Elijah that God only should be worshiped.

"Jesus Christ became the connecting link. Jesus Christ comes now to intensify God's purpose, and to reveal to man the fact that there is a true and living God, and though man has fallen from his first estate, that God is able to redeem man. And though man is a wayward son God desires to show His love for him and His ever care for him. He invited the prodigal's return to the Father's house, where he will find forgiveness of his sins. There he will robe him in purple and fine linen, and will fall on his neck and kiss him, and love him. Through the new birth he becomes not as a hired servant but as a new son, and he will no longer feed on the husks the swine would not eat, nor daily with the sins of former days, but will be a son, who now shares all the blessings of the Father."

Rev. Barr announced the get-together meeting Thursday evening, February 22, at the church, and said he hoped that every one of the seventy-seven members would be present.

TEXT OF THE COMPLAINT IN THE INJUNCTION PROCEEDINGS

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF LOS ANGELES

GEORGE A. MONTGOMERY, Plaintiff.
—vs.—
SPENCER ROBINSON, S. A. DAVIS, C. E. KIMLIN, A. H. LAPHAM, DWIGHT W. STEPHENSON, as City Councilmen, and H. C. SAULSBURY, as Controller, and J. C. SHERER, as City Treasurer, all of the City of Glendale, Los Angeles County, California, Defendants.

COMPLAINT

I.

The Plaintiff for a first cause of action against the above named Defendants, alleges:

1. That at the present time and at all times mentioned in this complaint, this Plaintiff was and he now is a resident elector and a taxpayer in the said City of Glendale and he owns real and personal property therein which is now and will be liable for taxation therein.

2. The City of Glendale is a Municipal Corporation in the County of Los Angeles and State of California and at all times mentioned in this Complaint was such a corporation, and Defendants SPENCER ROBINSON, S. A. DAVIS, C. E. KIMLIN, A. H. LAPHAM and DWIGHT W. STEPHENSON were and now are the members of the City Council of said City, and H. C. SAULSBURY, its Controller, and J. C. SHERER its Treasurer.

3. Said City of Glendale since July 5, 1921, has been and now is governed by a Freeholders Charter, duly framed and adopted in accordance with Section 8, Article XI of the Constitution of the State of California.

4. On or about the 5th day of July, 1922, the Defendants, SPENCER ROBINSON, S. A. DAVIS, C. E. KIMLIN, A. H. LAPHAM and DWIGHT W. STEPHENSON, as the City Council of the said City of Glendale, pretending to act for and on behalf of said city, unlawfully bought and purchased from one, ELIZABETH JONES, on credit, a certain tract of land said to contain about One Hundred (100) acres, and more particularly described in the Contract hereinafter set forth. By said pretended and unlawful purchase the said City Council incurred an indebtedness or liability against the said City of Glendale for the sum of Sixty Thousand Dollars ($60,000.00) and a further indebtedness or liability for interest upon same at seven per cent (7%) per annum from date of said Contract, payable quarterly until the full amount of said indebtedness shall be fully paid. Said pretended and unlawful purchase being evidenced by a written agreement purporting to bind the City of Glendale, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked Exhibit "A" and made a part of this Complaint.

5. The said unlawful indebtedness and liability of Sixty Thousand Dollars ($60,000.00) was incurred by the said Defendants, the said City Council of the City of Glendale, without having provided for the payment thereof or any part thereof in the revenue for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1922, and ending June 30, 1923, and without the assent of two-thirds (2-3) of the qualified electors voting at an election held or to be held for the purpose of approving the same, contrary to Section 18 of Article XI of the Constitution of the State of California.

6. Plaintiff further alleges that Section 9 of Article VI of the Charter of the said City of Glendale provides as follows:

"CONTRACTS: In the erection, improvement and repair of all public buildings and works, in all street and sewer work, the installation of pipes, fire hydrants, wells, pumping plants, conduits, electric transmission lines, sub-stations, power plants, gas mains and generators, improvement and development of parks and playgrounds, and works for protection against overflow, and in furnishing any supplies or materials for the same, when the expenditure required for the same shall exceed the sum of One Thousand Dollars, the same shall be done by contract, and shall be let to the lowest responsible bidder, after notice by publication in the official newspaper by two insertions, the first of which will be at least ten days before the time for opening bids; * * * "

And the said Defendants in the incurring of said unlawful debt of Sixty Thousand Dollars ($60,000.00) and the execution and delivery of the said contract purporting to bind the said City of Glendale, a Municipal Corporation, did not advertise for bids in the official newspaper of said city, or in any newspaper, or did not comply with the provisions of said Charter aforesaid.

7. Plaintiff further alleges upon information and belief that there was no appropriation made in the fiscal year 1922-1923 to meet the said indebtedness or any part thereof, and at the time of the signing of said contract there were no available funds on hand that might be lawfully applied thereon and to meet the said payment of Twenty Thousand Dollars ($20,000.00) demanded by the said contract; and the said Defendants, the City Council, in order to raise funds to make it appear that there were funds on hand to apply on the said contract to pay Twenty Thousand Dollars ($20,000.00) on the 13th day of July, 1922, wrongfully and unlawfully made transfers of the public funds of the said City of Glendale as follows:

JULY 13TH, 1922.

"Present: Lapham, Robinson, Stephenson.
"Absent: Davis, Kimlin.

On motion of Councilman Stephenson, the following resolution was adopted.

"Vote as follows:
Ayes: Lapham, Robinson, Stephenson.
"Noes: None.
"Absent: Davis Kimlin.

"RESOLVED, That unused balances in certain appropriations in the General Budget for the year 1922-1923, are hereby transferred to the unappropriated reserve as follows:

"From the division of Garbage Collection—salaries and wages $6,000
"From the division of Rubbish Collection—salaries and wages 5,000
"From the division of Street Lighting 2,500
From the division of Street Sweeping—salaries and wages 4,000

"RESOLVED FURTHER, That the sum of $17,500 is hereby appropriated from the unappropriated reserve of the General Budget for the year 1922-1923 for the purchase of the new park in Verdugo Road.

"RESOLVED FURTHER, that the following sums are hereby transferred to the General Budget Fund to be repaid on collection of taxes levied from the Public Service Budget Fund: $12,000
"From the Compensation Insurance Reserve Fund..... 3,500
"From the General Reserve Fund ..... 2,000"

That the ordinance of said city, fixing the amount of money to be raised by taxation in the said City of Glendale, for the fiscal year of 1922-1923 was not passed until August 7th, 1922, and after the signing of the said contract and making of the transfers as aforesaid.

8. Section 1 of Article XI of the Charter of the said City of Glendale, among other things, provides as follows:

" * * * All orders for the purchase of goods, materials or supplies, and all orders or contracts proposed to be entered into by the city, by virtue of which any money shall or may become payable by the city, except contracts the expense of which is to be paid by assessments upon properties benefited or affected thereby, shall before becoming effective, on behalf of the city, be presented to the Controller and have indorsed thereon his certificate that there remains unexpended and unapplied in the City Treasury, as provided by this Charter, a balance of the appropriation or fund applicable thereto sufficient to pay the estimated expense to be incurred during the then current fiscal year under said order or contract as estimated by the board or officer making the same, or that adequate provision therefor has been made in the tax levy, or by other revenues to be received by the city as estimated in the budgets. It shall be the duty of the Controller to make such indorsement upon every such contract or order so presented to him if there remains unexpended and unapplied the said estimated amount in any appropriation fund or tax levy, or other estimated revenue applicable thereto, and thereafter he shall hold and retain the said amount to pay the expense to be incurred under said order or contract until the same is fully performed and expense paid."

The Plaintiff further alleges that the contract set forth herein, "Exhibit A," was not presented to the Controller and was not endorsed by him as required by the provisions of the Charter above set forth.

9. And under the provisions of the Charter of the said City of Glendale, the Defendants, the City Council, will order to be drawn and issued illegal orders or warrants for the public funds of the said city to be paid out and to apply on and in payment of said illegal indebtedness attempted to be created by said contract; and the Defendant, the Controller of said city, will endorse illegal warrants or orders to pay out said public funds called for and provided to be paid under the said unlawful contract; and the Defendant, the City Treasurer, will pay out the said public funds upon the said illegal orders and warrants unless they are restrained from so doing by an order from this court. And the taxes levied to pay such sums of money will be a lien upon the real and personal property of the Plaintiff and other taxpayers in said City of Glendale, and the Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law in the premises.

10. Said land so attempted to be purchased and acquired by the Defendants for a park is of little value except for a pasture and is situated several miles away from the business section of the City of Glendale, in Verdugo Canyon, is all rough mountain slope except about ten (10) acres and is nearly all unfit for park or playground purposes and unfit for any municipal purposes whatever.

II.

For a second cause of action against the Defendants herein, the Plaintiff further alleges:

1. That all of the allegations contained in paragraphs 1, 2, 3 and 6 of the Plaintiff's first cause of action are applicable to and the Plaintiff requests the court to consider the same as applicable to the Plaintiff's second cause of action the same as if fully set forth in the second cause of action.

2. That on or about the 27th day of November, 1922, one Roy L. Kent took a certain written contract or an option upon certain land described therein, which contract reads as follows:

"RADCLIFF REALTY CO.,
Burbank, Calif.

"Burbank, California, Nov. 27, 1922.

"Seller reserves the pumping plant equipment, but same shall remain until ground is needed for other purposes. Seller agrees to supply purchasers with water.

"If the title should prove defective otherwise and cannot be made good within 60 days from date of discovery, the deposit will be refunded; but if the balance of the purchase price is not paid at the time and in manner above specified, then this deposit shall be forfeited without recourse as liquidated damages. This receipt is given, subject to approval of owner, who agrees to pay the regular commission out of the first cash payment.

"Release clause to be given satisfactory to both parties.
"We hereby agree to all conditions herein contained.

"On motion of Councilman Davis, the following resolution was adopted:

"Vote as follows:
"Ayes: Davis, Kimlin, Lapham, Robinson, Stephenson.
"Noes: None.
"Absent: None."

4. Plaintiff further alleges that without publishing the foregoing resolution as required by law in the ordinances and the charter of the said city and in pursuance of the foregoing resolutions and on the 9th day of December, 1922, the said City Council of the City of Glendale, intending to acquire by purchase from the said Roy L. Kent or John D. Radcliff, the said tract of land at a price of $66,000.00 and intending thereby to incur an indebtedness or liability against the said City of Glendale for the sum of $66,000.00 and a further indebtedness and liability for the interest provided for in the said purchase, to-wit: 7% interest thereon, payable quarterly; that the said Defendants caused and empowered the Defendant, Spencer Robinson as Mayor of the City of Glendale, to execute and deliver a written contract of purchase for said land, a copy of which contract is hereto attached, marked 'Exhibit B" and made a part of this complaint.

Defendants further on said date caused to be executed and placed in escrow, certain instructions relative to said attempted purchase, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit C" and made a part hereof.

5. The said indebtedness and liability of $66,000.00 attempted to be incurred and created against the City of Glendale by the said Defendants, the City Council thereof, was so incurred and created without having provided for the payment thereof in the revenues for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1923; and was without the assent of two-thirds (2-3) of the qualified electors voting at an election held or to be held for the purpose of approving the same, contrary to Section 18 of Article XI of the Constitution of the State of California.

6. Said Defendants, the City Council, in the execution of said contract and the incurring of said indebtedness of $66,000.00 did not advertise for bids in the official newspaper of said city or in any newspaper and thereby violated the provisions of the charter of the said City of Glendale, set forth in paragraph 6 in the Plaintiff's first cause of action, and did not secure the certificate of the Controller thereon, as required by the said city charter, set out in paragraph 8, of Plaintiff's first cause of action.

7. Plaintiff alleges upon information and belief that the City Council, Defendants herein, acquired said land for the unlawful purpose of using the same as an aviation field and for the further unlawful purpose of leasing the same or parts thereof to individuals for private use, which the Plaintiff charges are for illegal and unauthorized purposes and ultra vires. And Plaintiff further shows to the court that the alleged claim that said land was acquired for water bearing purposes is wholly false; that said City of Glendale now owns title to about fourteen (14) acres of land for water or well purposes and that this amount of acreage is sufficient for all water purposes whatever that is now needed or will be needed by the said City of Glendale at any time; and further that by a decree of this court duly entered in Book 144, page 243 of Judgments, the city of Los Angeles was adjudged to have the paramount right to take and use all of the water underlying the said land pretended to be purchased for water purposes.

8. The Defendants, the City Council, under the charter of the said city will order to be drawn, illegal orders or warrants for the payment on said land which is provided for in said contract, out of the public funds of the said city and the Defendant, the Controller, will approve and draw such orders and warrants upon the City Treasurer, and the City Treasurer will pay out of the public funds of the said city, such illegal or unlawful orders or warrants unless they are restrained from so doing by an order of this court. And the taxes levied to pay such sums of money will become a lien upon the real estate and personal property of the Plaintiff and other taxpayers of said city and said property will be sold for said liens and will create a cloud upon the title of the Plaintiff; and the Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law herein.

WHEREFORE, the Plaintiff prays that these Defendants and each of them and their successors in office may be restrained and enjoined from paying out any of the public funds of the City of Glendale; from levying any taxes upon the taxable property of this Plaintiff situated within the limits of said city to pay upon said illegal contracts or any part of them; that they may be restrained from drawing any orders upon any of the public funds of the said city to pay upon or apply upon said contracts or either of them or any part thereof, or any interest thereon; that said contracts and each of them may be decreed to be illegal and void and that the City of Glendale be decreed to be not liable and that upon a final hearing of said cause that the injunction may be made perpetual; and for such other, further and different relief as justice and equity may require.

JOHN EVERSON,
Attorney for Plaintiff.

POINTS OF LAW ON INJUNCTION APPLICATION

Statement of Alleged Fact Upon Which Mr. Montgomery Bases His Suit

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, IN AND FOR LOS ANGELES COUNTY

GEORGE A. MONTGOMERY, Plaintiff,
SPENCER ROBINSON and Others, Defendants.
Points and Authorities on Application for Injunction.

Statement of Facts:

This is an action brought by a citizen and taxpayer of the City of Glendale, against the officers of the city that have to do with the expenditure of the city funds of the municipality; and an injunction is sought to prevent the expenditure of funds upon two alleged contracts, copies of which are set out in the complaint.

I.

The plaintiff contends that he, as such citizen and taxpayer, has the right to maintain this action.

Winn v. Shaw, 87 Cal., 636.
Barry v. Goad, 89 Cal., 215.
Bradford v. San Francisco, 112 Cal., 543.
County of Tehama v. Sisson, 152 Cal., 167.

II.

Plaintiff further contends that the contracts entered into purporting to bind the City of Glendale, 'incur indebtedness or liability' in violation of Section 18 of Article XI, of the constitution of the State of California. Said section reads in part as follows:

"No county, city, town, township, board of education, or school district, shall incur any indebtedness or liability in any manner or for any purpose exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for such year, without the assent of two-thirds of the qualified elec-

Truths in Epigram

Man is born to expend every particle of strength that God Almighty has given him, in doing the work he finds he is fit for.—Carlyle.

No worthy enterprise can be done by us without continual plodding.—Milton.

He oft finds present help, who does his grief impart.—Spenser.

MEDIATION SUGGESTED

A Paris dispatch says that an offer of the United States to mediate between France and Germany would be regarded there as a hostile act. Such an offer, however, could not fairly be so adjudged. At the same time, there appears no probability that the matter is to be put to a test. An offer to mediate necessarily would involve the intimation that possibly there were points to discuss; that doubt existed as to whether either side was entirely in the right. This might offend, but it would not be hostile. On the contrary it would be distinctly friendly.

In some measure the United States is responsible for conditions in Europe. It withdrew too soon. It alienated itself from the allies without legitimate excuse. It made a separate peace with Germany after such a course had been denounced as "unthinkable" by the very partisans who later supported it. The United States declined to enter the League of Nations, when by doing so it might have made that organization meet the exact purpose, for which Senator Borah is now shouting lustily, the purpose of outlawing war; making war a crime. Any association capable of doing this would indeed be a League, identical in theory and effect with the one it had been the wont of Borah and others of his ilk to flout. Why this sudden change? Perhaps the senatorial conscience has been pricking.

There is nothing whatever new in the proposition to make war a crime, and to list it among preventable crimes. The powers could do this if they would. Had the League of Nations not been strangled, they would have done it. Civilization was given its chance of salvation and spurned the chance. Whether the taking up of the old ideas now has a definite meaning; whether the unsponsored plan to mediate is another indication that the principle still is virile, perhaps will be shown later.

The late General Otis had thought out a plan for a world tribunal. Could it have been put into operation the result must have been comprehensive and most benign. It never was presented to the senate in the exact form of the general's devising, but projects having its essence were submitted there. Their fate was to be railed at by the Borahs, who now raise their voices, when it may be too late, in behalf of precisely the same international scheme; although they may not be aware that it is the same.

When two nations are in controversy, there should be mediation, and the authority to enforce the mandates resulting. If either party elected to regard the mediation as a hostile act, that would be its privilege, but just the same it should have to abide by the decision.

MAKING HIGHWAYS SAFE

The modern bandit, haunting the highways, has taken no lesson in chivalry from Robin Hood. That jolly young blade always robbed somebody who really seemed to need the discipline of loss, and he was willing to share his loot with the poor. Robbery as practised by Robin Hood was as much a diversion as a crime. The bandit of today is not only a mean type of thief, but the most brutal sort of thug. He is quite ready to kill a victim who resists, and perhaps, anticipating resistence, kills the victim as the initial move in the operation.

It happens that sometimes when the robbery takes place in a remote spot where the thief feels secure, that he chats with the persons whom he deprives of money and portable valuables. Even at that he gives them to understand that the penalty of opposing his wishes would be death. The citizen out at night on a lonely road is made uneasy by the possible presence of one of these prowlers, and by wondering what would be the proper course were he to be halted. As to the proper course there is no fixed rule. The effort to resist might be fatal. The temptation to resist would be strong, for it is undeniable that to put a bandit permanently out of business would be a pleasure if not a duty.

The sheriff of Los Angeles county is to have more men, and he surely needs them. The authorities are striving earnestly to reduce the criminal population to the extent that when a man starts from his office to his home after sundown, he will have a fair chance of arriving whole as to skin, and with his purse still in his pocket.

THE EQUATION OF CHARACTER

Lenine seized power in Russia, and all the world denounces him. Mussolini seized power in Italy, and the world seems to regard his course with equanimity, and in large measure, with approval. It is not, then, the mere act that becomes the subject of adverse criticism. The purpose of the act, the method employed, and the character of the actor, come into consideration.

So far as has appeared Lenine did not have the inspiration of a single unselfish desire. He was the paranoiac, clothed with authority none the less effective for the nonce, because of having been stolen. He proceeded to put into operation certain plans, the crux of all of them being the exaltation of himself. The regime he set up was a tyrannous oligarchy, maintained at the expense of the victims whom it was, in theory, to have benefited. The people were left to starve while the Lenine project was being tested. They were deprived of liberty. Every joy was taken out of life for them. They could eat the bread of charity, or they could die, the while their master continued his experimentation even after it had eventuated in the most tragic and ghastly failure of all history. Lenine is an intellectual gone mad.

Mussolini is a practical man in whom the sentiment of patriotism is not dead. His love of country manifestly is stronger than his love of self. He has no ambition to enslave his fellows. He wants society to function, labor to earn legitimate reward. Butchery and lesser brutalities, [illegible] and intimidation, seem not to enter into his projects. The way did not have to be cleared for him by the murder of the royal family. The king, acknowledged head of the government, and still holding that status, welcomed him. Mussolini, far from ruining Italy as Lenine has ruined Russia, has put it on a more solid basis; won for it respect and not loathing.

The difference in the two men is that of character. One is a knave of high but perverted mentality. The other may be a less impressive personality, but he is not mad, and he is not a knave.

It is not surprising that oil men should contemplate the investment of millions at San Pedro in facilities for the handling of their product. Oil was not being thought of in southern California when the harbor was planned, and so nobody had an idea then that San Pedro was destined to become one of the great oil ports of the world.

There has been so much said by prejudiced groups and individuals for and against recognition of Mexico, that it really would be enlightening to receive from an authoritative source, such as the department of state, some explanation of the unneighborly attitude towards a neighbor.

PAPINI'S LIFE OF CHRIST

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Some time ago Glenn Frank, the editor of the Century Magazine, remarked that the book most needed now in the field of literature was a good life of Christ, one suited to the modern mind.

Dr. Frank Crane

And now comes Giovanni Papini, an Italian, and heretofore one of that peculiarly bitter type of atheists that are found in Catholic countries, and writes a life of Christ that gives every indication of being the book needed.

Papini is a man of letters of high standing in Italy. He was called a master by Bergson and was a friend and disciple of Henry James. He has written many novels, poems, plays, and essays. He thus brings to the new book that which is supremely needed in treating the subject, that is, creative imagination and literary craftsmanship.

I do not know of any other life of Christ outside the Gospels that I can recommend to cultured readers. As Papini says: "The lives of Jesus written for pious readers exhale, almost all of them, a sort of withered mustiness, the very first page of which repels readers used to more delicate and substantial fare. There is an odor of burnt-out lamp-wick, a smell of stale incense and rancid oil that sticks in the throat. The reader acquainted with the biographies of great men written with greatness feels his heart fail him as he advances into this flabby prose, patched up with commonplaces that were alive a thousand years ago, but which are now dead and petrified.

"When we pass from the bad taste of the devotional compilers to the writers who monopolize 'historic truth,' we fall from pietistic boredom into sterile confusion. Trying to give us erudite criticism, they miss the gist of the whole matter."

The world is not interested in scientific disputes nor higher criticisms any more than it is interested in the rhodomontades of evangelical propaganda.

But the world is interested in Christ more than in any other one thing or person, for the simple reason that He is the one figure that has had the greatest influence upou the human race. It is His vast ideas that inspire us; it is His warm spirit that still gives us courage; it is the charm of His personality that still is the most considerable power in the modern world.

There is need of a life of Christ that shall show this, that shall cut away the layers of both theological discussion and skeptical criticism, and show us the real Man, that center of light and of passion which after 2000 years in the world is still undimmed.

Christianity has had hard sledding. It early fell under the yoke of organization and became the instrument of tyranny. It has been overloaded with the mummeries of heathenism. Men of every age have tried their utmost to imprison the living spirit of Jesus in their institutions.

It is such books as this of Papini that open the prison door and let Jesus out into His world.

At last here is a life of Christ that the self-respecting mind can read and enjoy.

THE RIGHT WORD

QUERIES

"Yourself"—"Diplomatically"—"Alibi"

Chas. Madsen, Chicago, Ill.: "Kindly publish in your column whether the words, yourself diplomatically, and alibi are correct in the following: Who owns the furniture, your husband or yourself? Mr. Jones will diplomatically criticize the speeches; His alibi for not coming . . ."

Answer: Yourself and diplomatically are correctly used. In the last sentence the right word is reason.

"John and Me Had a Talk"

Miss Ann Zmickert, New York City: "There has been a difference of opinion in regard to the following. Which is correct: John and I had a talk about it this morning; John and me had a talk about it this morning?"

Answer: "I" is the right word; as, John and I had a talk.

What Is Wrong?

H. S. W., New York City: "In the Literary Digest for January 13, 1923, the Editor of The Lexicographer's Easy Chair, in answering an inquiry as to the meaning of a certain Latin phrase, states, 'The implication being that nothing is powerful enough to permanently banish the family whose motto this is'. Is there anything in the grammatical construction to critisize in the above answer?"

Answer: No. This negative reply is given with full awareness of the so called "split infinitive" to permanently banish. Foregoing is preferable to above, the next to the last word of your query.

"Alright"—"Reeve"

Theodore K. Fish, New York City: "Will you be good enough to advise me whether there is a word 'alright'? Several friends disagree with me when I insist that, properly, the expression consists of two separate words. Will you also define the word 'reeve' in replying?"

Answer: The word alright is obsolete. The correct spelling is all right. Reeve means to pass, as a rope or rod, through a hole, block, or aperture; to fasten in such a manner (a nautical term). Also, in English history it means an officer formerly holding authority over landed areas. Reeve is also the female of the ruff, a bird, an Old World sandpiper.

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

Perspective.

A thing we need to cultivate.

The artist gains it with reference to landscape.

JAMES W. FOLEY

He sees what things are in the foreground and what things in the background.

So he draws upon a canvas and makes you think you are looking at far distances.

His picture has depth.

* * *

That is because he has perspective.

He knows how to present his drawings to your eye so that you have the vision of a far field.

Of distant trees and foliage.

Of waters rolling out in the ocean.

Of tides coming upon the shore.

And yet it is only a flat surface upon which he draws or paints.

And any one thing is as near to you as another.

But some things look near and some distant.

* * *

There is a vision of living that requires perspective.

That tells you what things are important and what things are unimportant.

And you have to gain that perspective before you become versed in the fine art of living.

Otherwise things are of the same size and nearness and importance.

* * *

And if all things are of the same size and importance the bite of a flea becomes as important as the shark's crushing jaws.

An ant and an elephant are the same size.

A burned steak is a tragedy.

Little things become big ones.

Mountains become molehills and molehills become mountains.

* * *

Perspective in life gives you a sense of value.

It teaches you that few things are tragic after all.

For most things we think of as tragedies can be remedied or repaired.

So we are not too much concerned and agitated with trifles.

* * *

Many of the things over which we fret and worry and concern ourselves are trifles.

The smoking of a chimney.

The overdoing of a cake.

The heaviness of a biscuit.

The burning of a steak.

* * *

Without perspective we become fretters and complainers and worriers.

We become growlers and nuisances.

For we inflict our morbidities upon others.

And upon ourselves.

* * *

A flea bite is not important unless it infects us with some plague.

A scratch upon furniture is not important.

A scratch upon a human soul is important.

One is easily repaired.

The other is not so easily remedied.

* * *

We put a lot of things in the foreground of life that ought to be put far in the background.

And there are many things in the background that ought to be in the foreground.

Life, laughter, work, friendliness, tolerance, kindliness, gentleness, forgiveness, understanding—all should be in the foreground of life.

* * *

The petty things of life, the little angers and hatreds and hates and frets and fussings and gossips and envies—all of these should be far in the background.

And thus with the right perspective, we know more of the artistry of living.

Songs of the Poets

"'Twas Ever Thus"—By Henry Sambrooke Leigh (1837-1883)

(After Moore)

I never reared a young gazelle,
(Because, you see, I never tried);
But had it known and loved me well,
No doubt the creature would have died.
My rich and aged Uncle John
Has known me long and loves me well
But still persists in living on—
I would he were a young gazelle.

I never loved a tree or flower,
But, if I had, I beg to say
The blight, the wind, the sun, or shower
Would soon have withered it away.
I've dearly loved my Uncle John,
From childhood to the present hour,
And yet he will go living on—
I would he were a tree or flower!

WHERE THE CHARM LAY

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

He was a slight young person with a brief, black mustache and a pair of eyes that glowed softly like crude oil in the moonlight.

He was born in America under the shadow of modern stone cliff dwellings between which rush the shrieking demons of the elevated railroads. His body was slight, as his rations had been few in his growing years.

"I hiked from New York," he announced simply. "Had nothing but a pack, a frying pan, a ukelele and a book of poems. It was very pleasant."

"It's strange how many things can be pleasant," I remarked. "If only we have the sauce of philosophy. But why the hike?"

"Well, my attic in Greenwich village was getting a bit cramped. It was all right while I was experimenting; but after I mastered the technique of Batik portraits the fun was gone."

"I'd think it had just begun. Why was it gone after you succeeded?" I ventured.

"The element of accident was eliminated and the work was mere routine. What any artist likes is the feeling that MOST ANYTHING MAY HAPPEN NEXT. An artist is only a gambler in the beautiful. He plays with pigments and starves for the privilege—but if he starves too long he can't enjoy the element of accident." He smiled whimsically and brushed a long lock of jet black hair from his dusky eyes. "You can't have an accident unless a living object participates in the proceedings. I've got to make portraits now for people who can pay for them. When I get enough money I'll begin experimenting again. I've an idea that only experiment will reveal the possibilities of any art."

He unfolded a pack of dainty silk things and showed me the faces of many famous movie stars done in rich dyes on heavy silks.

"Nobody before me has done just these things," he murmured. "When I got an unexpected effect I felt like Columbus when he discovered the new world. It's THE ELEMENT OF ACCIDENT that keeps the work going. Columbus felt the lure of it, every prospector has glowed with it, every explorer, from the Phoenician fishermen to the last unknown who sailed out of the Golden Gate in a tiny yacht, has gone to see what lay concealed somewhere, something that accident might reveal.

"Take the recent unearthing of the tombs at Luxor. They were in a way accidental and the hope that accident would show the diggers a treasure room kept the excavators busy and eager for 16 years."

He stopped and unfolded a radiant silk Teddy with the patient grace of the man of dreams and when I had examied it and murmured:

"It's only the man who does nothing who never gets a kick out of living; because accidents do not happen except when work is in progress; but the hope of them keeps many a poor devil alive—and going."

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

TYRANNY OF TIPPING

[Manchester Guardian]

Is there any human institution that presents a more harmonious combination of bad economics and snobbery than does tipping? There have been many ingenious attempts to fix a fair wage in various trades and professions; but no piece rate, time rate, or combination of the two can be applied to those workers whose reward depends upon the caprice of a continually changing series of employers. Just as that highwayman who cries his "Stand and deliver" on a lonely heath was more certain of good trade returns than was his colleague whose place of business lay nearer the arms of the law, so it is with waiters and porters and hotel servants. Some of them even pay for the right to take up a pitch favorable for the extraction of gratuities. Nor is competition wholly confined to their side of the business. Rich and selfish people will give far more than their temporary servants normally expect, in order to corner for themselves service which should be shared by their fellow-guests; on ocean voyages this abuse is especially lusty. In fact, the system encourages all manner of minor vices—the servility that seeks reward disproportionate to the service rendered, the insolence that expresses contempt for a just reward, the snobbishness that aims at acquiring merit by overpayment. In these and other vices giver and recipient are shamed alike.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

Judge Bledsoe of the federal court recently told 300 budding lawyers some very wholesome truth concerning their prospective calling. He said that upon the lawyer himself rests the greatest responsibility in sustaining the good repute of the law among the people at large.

HENRY JAMES

Doubtless this is because the lawyer is also the maker of law. He not only appears at court, of which he becomes a sworn official, but the law on which he depends there in behalf of his client, is a lawyer-made law. When he is able to twist and distort it and turn it to evil purposes, a shadow is cast upon his calling.

"It is particularly the duty of the young lawyer," continued the judge, "not to stoop to the temptations, which being novel to him, may not appear as heinous to him as they do to the experienced lawyer."

But it happens that many who by their habitual methods of practice bring reproach upon a high and useful profession, are not young. On the contrary, they have grown old in iniquity. They may reach a status such that for a defendant to seek them as counsel is a confession of guilt. Trials often resolve themselves into a mere matching of wits, a contest of trickeries. The intent of the lawyer, knowing his client guilty, is to bring about his acquittal. To this end he assembles a stupid or corrupt jury, drags in countless technicalities, registers useless objections, makes frivolous appeals. By this course perhaps he wins an unholy case. At least he causes delay, vexation and expense.

It is a singular fact noted by financial writers that Europeans are buying American securities. Evidently they know a good thing when they see it. At the same time many Americans, ignoring the securities they might buy at home, go abroad to buy the securities that Europeans themselves reject. They get these at a low figure, and because of this are willing to run a risk for the possibility of greater profits.

The European seems to be the wiser investor.

A man went to a coppersmith and ordered the construction of a still. The artisan undertook the work, and the man came back as a representative of prohibition law enforcement, and caused his arrest for an illegal act.

The coppersmith should not have made the still. So much is evident. That he committed any worse crime than the man who ordered and agreed to pay for the still, is not evident at all.

Inspiring crime for the purpose of detecting it is pretty small business. It calls for the punishment of the instigator as principal.

WATCHING THE PARADE

BY JOHN PILGRIM

Ever notice what odd stuff one hears sometimes in the elevators? Or on the street cars? People who would not tell me—personal me—what street they live on have no hesitancy in being almost shameless in their confessions in a crowd. One hears interesting things sometimes, too. Things that make one think.

"Whassa matter with you?" asked some one of a dark young man in the elevator the other day. "You look flushed. Too high blood pressure?"

The other fellow nodded. Then, as if the memory of his wrongs overpowered him, he burst out:

"I'd like to know how our ancestors lived through the winter, anyhow," he said. "My goshamighty I've just had a touch of it."

He had been visiting the old folks in a New England valley, he said. The first cold day of fall grandma set a crock of buckwheat batter to sizzle in the warm corner near the stove, and it will not cease sizzling all winter long. The finest buckweat cakes he ever tasted, he said. These fancy hotels, where the cooks are all imported from the Ruhr or Czecho-Slovakia or somewhere, serve an adulterated, floured up mess of gummy dough.

"And maple syrup," he said, ecstatically. "Man, you don't know what eating is!"

Then his face clouded again.

"And they sit there," he said, "all my folks, just like they always have sat there, all winter long, for generations and generations. Sit next to the stove, wearing red flannel, eating buckwheat cakes. Never a breath of air in the house from fall until spring except what leaks in. When they go out to feed the stock the men folks are covered with so much clothes they can't bend."

After a month he hurried back to the hellish roar of the city, where the buckwheat cakes are gummy and the maple syrup has a cane field for a parent, and where the windows are open and green salads are served——

"Honest," said he," I could not have stood another month of that wholesome rural fare. Just sitting there and eating cakes."

FIFTH INSTALLMENT

Loder was taking off his coat, but stopped in the operation.

"This morning?" he said. "Oh, did I?" Then, struck by the opportunity the words gave him, he turned towards the secretary. "You've got to get used to me, Greening," he said. "You haven't quite grasped me yet, I can see. I'm a man of moods, you know. Up to the present you've seen my slack side, my jarred side, but I have quite another when I care to show it. I'm a sort of Jekyll-and-Hyde affair." Again he laughed, and Greening echoed the sound diffidently. Chilcote had evidently discouraged familiarity.

Loder eyed him with abrupt understanding. He recognized the loneliness in the anxious, conciliatory manner.

"You're tired," he said, kindly. "Go to bed. I've got some thinking to do. Good-night." He held out his hand.

Greening took it, still half distrustful of this fresh side to so complex a man.

"Good-night, sir," he said. "Tomorrow, if you approve, I shall go on with my notes. I hope you will have a restful night."

For a second Loder's eyebrows went up, but he recovered himself instantly.

"Ah, thanks, Greening," he said. "Thanks. I think your hope will be fulfilled."

He watched the little secretary move softly and apologetically to the door; then he walked to the fire, and, resting his elbows on the mantelpiece, he took his face in his hands.

For a space he stood absolutely quiet, then his hands dropped to his sides and he turned slowly round. In that short space he had balanced things and found his bearings. The slight nervousness shown in his brusque sentences and overconfident manner faded out, and he faced facts steadily.

With the return of his calmness he took a long survey of the room. His glance brightened appreciatively as it traveled from the walls lined with well-bound books to the lamps modulated to the proper light; from the lamps to the desk fitted with every requirement. Nothing was lacking. All he had once possessed, all he had since dreamed of, was here, but on a greater scale. To enjoy the luxuries of life a man must go long without them. Loder had lived severely—so severely that until three weeks ago he had believed himself exempt from the temptations of humanity. Then the voice of the world had spoken, and within him another voice had answered, with the tone so clamorous and insistent that it had outcried his surprised and incredulous wonder at its existence and its claims. That had been the voice of suppressed ambition; and now as he stood in the new atmosphere a newer voice lifted itself. The joy of material things rose suddenly, overbalancing the last remnant of the philosophy he had reared. He saw all things in a fresh light—the soft carpets, the soft lights, the numberless pleasant, unnecessary things that color the passing landscape and oil the wheels of life. This was power—power made manifest. The choice bindings of one's books, the quiet harmony of one's surroundings, the gratifying deference of one's dependents—these were the visible, the outward signs, the things he had forgotten.

Crossing the room slowly, he lifted and looked at the different papers on the desk. They had a substantial feeling, an importance, an air of value. They were like the solemn keys of so many vexed problems. Beside the papers were a heap of letters neatly arranged and as yet unopened. He turned them over one by one. They were all thick, and interesting to look at. He smiled as he recalled his own scanty mail; envelopes long and bulky or narrow and thin—unwelcome manuscripts or very welcome checks. Having sorted the letters, he hesitated. It was his task to open them, but he had never in his life opened an envelope addressed to another man.

He stood uncertain, weighing them in his hand. Then all at once a look of attention and surprise crossed his face, and he raised his head. Some one had unmistakably paused outside the door which Greening had left ajar.

There was a moment of apparent doubt, then a stir of skirts, a quick, uncertain knock, and the intruder entered.

For a couple of seconds she stood in the doorway; then, as Loder made no effort to speak, she moved into the room. She had apparently but just returned from some entertainment, for, though she had drawn off her long gloves, she was still wearing an evening cloak of lace and fur.

That she was Chilcote's wife Loder instinctively realized the moment she entered the room. But a disconcerting confusion of ideas was all that followed the knowledge. He stood by the desk silent and awkward, trying to fit his expectations to his knowledge. Then faced by the hopelessness of the task he turned abruptly and looked at her again.

She had taken off her cloak and was standing by the fire. The compulsion of moving through life alone had set its seal upon her in a certain self-possession a certain confidence of pose; yet her figure as Loder then saw it backgrounded by the dark books and gowned in pale blue, had a suggestion of youthfulness that seemed a contradiction. The remembrance of Chilcote's epithets "cold" and "unsympathetic" came back to him with something like astonishment. He felt no uncertainty, no dread of discovery and humiliation in her presence as he had felt in the maid's; yet there was something in her face that made him infinitely more uncomfortable. A look he could find no name for—a friendliness that studiously covered another feeling, whether question, distrust, or actual dislike he could not say. With a strange sensation of awkwardness he sorted Chilcote's letters, waiting for her to speak.

As if divining his thought, she turned towards him. "I'm afraid I rather intrude," she said. "If you are busy—"

His sense of courtesy was touched; he had begun life with a high opinion of women, and the words shook up an echo of the old sentiment.

"Dont think that," he said, hastily. "I was only looking through—my letters. You mustn't rate yourself below letters. He was conscious that his tone was hurried, that his words were a little jagged; but Eve did not appear to notice. Unlike Greening, she took the new manner without surprise. She had known Chilcote for six years.

"I dined with the Fraides to-night," she said. "Mr. Fraide sent you a message."

Unconsciously Loder smiled. There was humor in the thought of a message to him from the great Fraide. To hide his amusement he wheeled one of the big lounge-chairs forward.

"Indeed," he said. "Won't you sit down?"

They were near together now, and he saw her face more fully. Again he was taken aback. Chilcote had spoken of her as successful and intelligent, but never as beautiful. Yet her beauty was a rare and uncommon fact. Her hair was black—not a glossy black, but the dusky black that is softer than any brown; her eyes were large and of a peculiarly pure blue; and her eyelashes were black, beautifully curved and of remarkable thickness.

"Won't you sit down?" he said again, cutting short his thoughts with some confusion.

"Thank you." She gravely accepted the proffered chair. But he saw that without any ostentation she drew her skirts aside as she passed him. The action displeased him unaccountably.

"Well," he said, shortly, "what had Fraide to say?" He walked to the mantel-piece with his customary movement and stood watching her. The instinct towards hiding his face had left him. Her instant and uninterested acceptance of him almost nettled him; his own half-contemptuous impression of Chilcote came to him unpleasantly, and with it the first desire to assert his own individuality. Stung by the conflicting emotions, he felt in Chilcote's pockets for something to smoke.

Eve saw and interpreted the action. "Are these your cigarettes?" She leaned towards a small table and took up a box of lizard-skin.

"Thanks." He took the box from her, and as it passed from one to the other he saw her glance at his rings. The glance was momentary; her lips parted to express question or surprise, then closed again without comment. More than any spoken words, the incident showed the gulf that separated husband and wife.

"Well?" he said again, "what about Fraide?"

At his words she sat straighter and looked at him more directly, as if bracing herself to a task.

"Mr. Fraide is—is as interested as ever in you," she began.

"Or in you?" Loder made the interruption precisely as he felt Chilcote would have made it. Then instantly he wished the words back.

Eve's warm skin colored more deeply; for a second the inscrutable underlying expression that puzzled him showed in her eyes, then she sank back into a corner of the chair.

"Why do you make such a point of sneering at my friends?" she asked, quietly. "I overlook it when you are—nervous." She halted slightly on the word. "But you are not nervous to-night."

Loder, to his great humiliation, reddened. Except for an occasional outburst on the part of Mrs. Robins, his charwoman, he had not merited a woman's displeasure for years.

"The sneer was unintentional," he said.

For the first time Eve showed a personal interest. She looked at him in a puzzled way. "If your apology was meant," she said, hesitatingly, "I should be glad to accept it."

Loder, uncertain of how to take the words, moved back to the desk. He carried an unlighted cigarette between his fingers.

There was an interval in which neither spoke. Then, at last, conscious of its awkwardness, Eve rose. With one hand on the back of her chair, she looked at him.

"Mr. Fraide thinks it's such a pity that"—she stopped to choose her words—"that you should lose hold on things—lose interest in things, as you are doing. He has been thinking a good deal about you in the last three weeks—ever since the day of your—your illness in the House; and it seems to him"—again she broke off, watching Loder's averted head—"it seems to him that if you made one real effort now, even now, to shake off your restlessness, that your—your health might improve. He thinks that the present crisis would be"—she hesitated—"would give you a tremendous opportunity. Your trade interests, bound up as they are with Persia, would give any opinion you might hold a double weight." Almost unconsciously a touch of warmth crept into her words.

"Mr. Fraide talked very seriously about the beginning of your career. He said that if only the spirit of your first days could come back—" Her tone grew quicker, as though she feared ridicule in Loder's silence. "He asked me to use my influence. I know that I have little—none, perhaps—but I couldn't tell him that, and so—so I promised."

"And have kept the promise?" Loder spoke at random. Her manner and her words had both affected him. There was a sensation of unreality in his brain.

"Yes," she answered. "I always want to do—what I can."

As she spoke a sudden realization of the efforts she was making struck upon him, and with it his scorn of Chilcote rose in renewed force.

"My intention—" he began, turning to her. Then the futility of any declaration silenced him. "I shall think over what you say," he added, after a minute's wait. "I suppose I can't say more than that."

Their eyes met and she smiled a little.

"I don't believe I expected as much," she said. "I think I'll go now. You have been wonderfully patient." Again she smiled slightly, at the same time extending her hand. The gesture was quite friendly, but in Loder's eyes it held relief as well as friendliness; and when their hands met he noticed that her fingers barely brushed his.

He picked up her cloak and carried it across the room. As he held the door open, he laid it quietly across her arm.

"I'll think over what you've said," he repeated.

Again she glanced at him as if suspecting sarcasm; then, partly reassured, she paused. "You will always despise your opportunities, and I suppose I shall always envy them," she said. "That's the way with men and women. Good-night!" With another faint smile she passed out into the corridor.

Loder waited until he heard the outer door close, then he crossed the room thoughtfully and dropped into the chair that she had vacated. He sat for a time looking at the hand her fingers had touched; then he lifted his head with a characteristic movement.

"By Jove!" he said, aloud, "how cordially she detests him!"

THE CHARACTERS IN THE STORY

JOHN CHILCOTE, member of the House of Commons, is the first man to hurry from his place when Parliament adjourns on a January night that is marked by the blackest fog in years and the news of border risings against the Persian government which are branded by

LAKELY, editor of St. George's, as the index of a long cherished Russian scheme, growing to maturity under the lax British policy. Nervous and high strung, Chilcote refuses a cab and walks. In the dense fog he jostles a stranger. Striking a match to light his cigarette, Chilcote is startled to see that the other man is his exact counterpart. They exchange cards, the stranger's revealing him to be

JOHN LODER. His nerves shattered by drugs, Chilcote seeks solace in the company of

LADY ASTRUPP, then goes to Parliament, where he finds himself unequal to his duties, despite the urgings of

FRAIDE, his party leader. Realizing he has become a hopeless slave to drug, Chilcote goes to the humble apartment of Loder and proposes they exchange places in the world and Loder, after reserving decision a day, agrees. They plan the deception, Loder to be given three weeks in which to learn Chilcote's handwriting, to familiarize himself with Chilcote's ways and acquaintances and to hide a bad scar on his finger with rings. Loder, in Chilcote's clothes, goes to Chilcote's home, is unsuspected by the maid and the new secretary

GREENING, who, however, is astonished at his master's compliment of the work he had been doing in making notes on the political position of Khorasan. "You rather pooh-poohed the matter this morning," he pointed out.

"So I found the maid and found the dog."

CHAPTER IX.

LODER slept soundly and dreamlessly in Chilcote's canopied bed. To him the big room with its severe magnificence suggested nothing of the gloom and solitude that it held in its owner's eyes. The ponderous furniture, the high ceiling, the heavy curtains, unchanged since the days of Chilcote's grandfather, all hinted at a far-reaching ownership that stirred him. The ownership was mythical in his regard, and the possessions a mirage, but they filled the day. And, surely, sufficient for the day—

That was his frame of mind as he opened his eyes on the following morning, and lay appreciative of his comfort, of the surrounding space, even of the light that filtered through the curtain chinks, suggestive of a world recreated. With day, all things seem possible to a healthy man. He stretched his arms luxuriously, delighting in the glossy smoothness of the sheets.

What was it Chilcote had said? Better live for a day than exist for a lifetime! That was true; and life had begun. At thirty-six he was to know it for the first time.

He smiled, but without irony. Man is at his best at thirty-six, he mused. He has retained his enthusiasms and shed his exuberances; he has learned what to pick up and what to pass by; he no longer imagines that to drain a cup one must taste the dregs. He closed his eyes and stretched again, not his arms only, but his whole body. The pleasure of his mental state insisted on a physical expression. Then, sitting up in bed, he pressed the electric bell.

Chilcote's new valet responded.

"Pull those curtains, Renwick!" he said. "What's the time?" He had passed the ordeal of Renwick's eyes the night before.

The man was slow, even a little stupid. He drew back the curtains carefully, then looked at the small clock on the dressing-table. "Eight o'clock, sir. I didn't expect the bell so early, sir."

Loder felt reproved, and a pause followed.

"May I bring in your cup of tea, sir?"

"No. Not just yet. I'll have a bath first."

Renwick showed ponderous uncertainty. "Warm, sir?" he hazarded.

"No. Cold."

Still perplexed, the man left the room.

Loder smiled to himself. The chances of discovery in that quarter were not large. He was inclined to think that Chilcote had even overstepped necessity in the matter of his valet's duties.

He breakfasted alone, following Chilcote's habit, and after breakfast found his way to the study.

As he entered, Greening rose with the same conciliatory haste that he had shown the night before.

Loder nodded to him. "Early at work?" he said, pleasantly.

The little man showed instant, almost ridiculous relief. "Good-morning, sir," he said, "you too are early. I rather feared your nerves troubled you after I left last night, for I found your letters still unopened this morning. But I am glad to see you look so well."

Loder promptly turned his back to the light. "Oh, last night's letters!" he said. "To tell you the truth, Greening, my wife"—his hesitation was very slight—"my wife looked me up after you left, and we gossiped. I clean forgot the post." He smiled in an explanatory way as he moved to the desk and picked up the letters.

With Greening's eyes upon him, there was no time for scruples. With every creditable coolness he began opening the envelopes one by one. The letters were unimportant, and he passed them one after another to the secretary, experiencing a slight thrill of authority as each left his hand. Again the fact that power is visible in little things came to his mind.

"Give me my engagement-book, Greening," he said, when the letters had been disposed of.

The book that Greening handed him was neat in shape and bound, like Chilcote's cigarette-case, in lizard-skin.

As Loder took it, the gold monogram "J. C." winked at him in the bright morning light. The incident moved his sense of humor. He and the book were co-operators in the fraud, it seemed. He felt an inclination to wink back. Nevertheless, he opened it with proper gravity and skimmed the pages.

The page devoted to the day was almost full. On every other line were jottings in Chilcote's irregular hand, and twice among the entries appeared a prominent cross in blue pencilling. Loder's interest quickened as his eye caught the mark. It had been agreed between them that only engagements essential to Chilcote's public life need be carried through during his absence, and these, to save confusion, were to be crossed in blue pencil. The rest, for the most part social claims, were to be left to circumstance and Loder's inclination, Chilcote's erratic memory always accounting for the breaking of trivial promises.

But Loder in his new energy was anxious for obligations; the desire for fresh and greater tests grew with indulgence. He scanned the two lines with eagerness. The first was an interview with Cresham, one of Chilcote's supporters in Wark; the other an engagement to lunch with Fraide. At the idea of the former his interest quickened, but at thought of the latter it quailed momentarily. Had the entry been a royal command it would have affected him infinitely less. For a space his assurance faltered; then, by coincidence, the recollection of Eve and Eve's words of last night came back to him, and his mind was filled with a new sensation.

Because of Chilcote, he was despised by Chilcote's wife! There was no denying that in all the pleasant excitement of the adventure that knowledge had rankled. It came to him now linked with remembrance of the slight, reluctant touch of her fingers, the faintly evasive dislike underlying her glance. It was a trivial thing, but it touched his pride as a man. That was how he put it to himself. It wasn't that he valued this woman's opinion—any woman's opinion; it was merely that it touched his pride. He turned again to the window and gazed out, the engagement-book still between his hands. What if he compelled her respect? What if by his own personality cloaked under Chilcote's identity he forced her to admit his capability? It was a matter of pride, after all—scarcely even of pride; self-respect was a better word.

Satisfied by his own reasoning, he turned back into the room.

"See to those letters, Greening," he said. "And for the rest of the morning's work you might go on with your Khorasan notes. I believe we'll want every inch of knowledge we can get in that quarter before we're much older. I'll see you again later." With a reassuring nod he crossed the room and passed through the door.

He lunched with Fraide at his club, and afterwards walked with him to Westminster. The walk and lunch were both memorable. In that hour he learned many things that had been sealed to him before. He tasted his first draught of real elation, his first drop of real discomfiture. He saw for the first time how a great man may condescend—how unostentatiously, how fully, how delightfully. He felt what tact and kindness perfectly combined may accomplish, and he burned inwardly with a sense of duplicity that crushed and elated him alternately. He was John Loder, friendless, penniless, with no present and no future, yet he walked down Whitehall in the full light of day with one of the greatest statesmen England has known.

Some strangers were being shown over the Terrace when he and Fraide reached the House, and, noticing the open door, the old man paused.

"I never refuse fresh air," he said. "Shall we take another breath of it before settling down?" He took Loder's arm and drew him forward. As they passed through the door-way the pressure of his fingers tightened. "I shall reckon today among my pleasantest memories, Chilcote," he said, gravely. "I can't explain the feeling, but I seem to have touched Eve's husband—the real you, more closely this morning than I ever did before. It has been a genuine happiness." He looked up with the eyes that, through all his years of action and responsibility, had remained so bright.

But Loder paled suddenly, and his glance turned to the river—wide, mysterious, secret. Unconsciously Fraide had stripped the illusion. It was not John Loder who walked here; it was Chilcote—Chilcote with his position, his constituency—his wife. He half extricated his arm, but Fraide held it.

"No," he said. "Don't draw away from me. You have always been too ready to do that. It is not often I have a pleasant truth to tell. I won't be deprived of the enjoyment."

"Can the truth ever be pleasant, sir?" Involuntarily Loder echoed Chilcote.

Fraide looked up. He was half a head shorter than his companion, though his dignity concealed the fact. "Chilcote," he said, seriously, "give up cynicism! It is the trade-mark of failure, and I do not like it in my—friends.

Loder said nothing. The quiet insight of the reproof, its mitigating kindness, touched him sharply In that moment he saw the rails down which he had sent his little car of existence spinning, and the sight daunted him. The track was steeper, the gauge narrower, than he had guessed; there were curves and sidings upon which he had not reckoned. He turned his head and met Fraide's glance.

"Don't count too much on me, sir," he said, slowly. "I might disappoint you again." His voice broke off on the last word, for the sound of other voices and of laughter came to them across the Terrace as a group of two women and three men passed through the open door. At a glance he realized that the slighter of the two women was Eve.

Seeing them, she disengaged herself from her party and came quickly forward. He saw her cheeks flush and her eyes brighten pleasantly as they rested on his companion; but he noticed also that after her first cursory glance she avoided his own direction.

As she came towards them. Fraide drew away his hand in readiness to greet her.

"Here comes my godchild!" he said. "I often wish, Chilcote, that I could do away with the prefix." He added the last words in an undertone as he reached them; then he responded warmly to her smile.

"What!" he said. "Turning the Terrace into the Garden of Eden in January! We cannot allow this."

Eve laughed. "Blame Lady Sarah!" she said. "We met at lunch, and she carried me off. Needless to say I hadn't to ask where."

They both laughed, and Loder joined, a little uncertainly. He had yet to learn that the devotion of Fraide and his wife was a long-standing jest in their particular set.

At the sound of his tardy laugh Eve turned to him. "I hope I didn't rob you of all sleep last night," she said. "I caught him in his den," she explained, turning to Fraide, "and invaded it most courageously. I believe we talked till two."

Again Loder noticed how quickly she looked from him to Fraide. The knowledge roused his self-assertion.

"I had an excellent night," he said. "Do I lok as if I hadn't slept?"

Somewhat slowly and reluctantly Eve looked back. "No," she said, truthfully, and with a faint surprise that to Loder seemed the first genuine emotion she had shown regarding him. "No, I don't think I ever saw you look so well." She was quite unconscious and very charming as she made the admission. It struck Loder that her coloring of hair and eyes gained by daylight—were brightened and vivified by their setting of sombre river and sombre stone.

Fraide smiled at her affectionately; then looked at Loder. "Chilcote has got a new lease of nerves, Eve," he said, quietly. "And I—believe—I have got a new henchman. But I see my wife beckoning to me. I must have a word with her before she flits away. May I be excused?" He made a courteous gesture of apology; then smiled at Eve.

She looked after him as he moved away. "I sometimes wonder what I should do if anything were to happen to the Fraides," she said, a little wistfully. Then almost at once she laughed, as if regretting her impulsiveness. "You hear what he said," she went on, in a different voice. "Am I really to congratulate you?"

The change of tone stung Loder unaccountably. "Will you always disbelieve in me?" he asked.

Without answering, she walked slowly across the deserted Terrace and, pausing by the parapet, laid her hand on the stone-work. Still in silence she looked out across the river.

Loder had followed closely. Again her aloofness seemed a challenge. "Will you always disbelieve in me?" he repeated.

At last she looked up at him, slowly.

"Have you ever given me cause to believe?" she asked, in a quiet voice.

To this truth he found no answer, though the subdued incredulity nettled him afresh.

Prompted to a further effort, he spoke again. "Patience is necessary with every person and every circumstance," he said. "We've all got to wait and see."

She did not lower her gaze as he spoke; and there seemed to him something disconcerting in the clear, candid blue of her eyes. With a sudden dread of her next words, he moved forward and laid his hand beside hers on the parapet.

"Patience is needed for every one," he repeated, quickly. "Sometimes a man is like a bit of wreckage; he drifts till some force stronger than himself gets in his way and stops him." He looked again at her face. He scarcely knew what he was saying; he only felt that he was a man in an egregiously false position, trying stupidly to justify himself. "Don't you believe that flotsam can sometimes be washed ashore?" he asked.

High above them Big Ben chimed the hour.

Eve raised her head. It almost seemed to him that he could see her answer trembling on her lips; then the voice of Lady Sarah Fraide came cheerfully from behind them.

"Eve!" she called. "Eve! We must fly. It's absolutely three o'clock!"

CHAPTER X.

IN the days that followed Fraide's marked adoption of him Loder behaved with a discretion that spoke well for his qualities. Many a man placed in the same responsible, and yet strangely irresponsible, position might have been excused if, for the time at least, he gave himself a loose rein. But Loder kept free of the temptation.

Like all other experiments, his showed unlooked-for features when put to a working test. Its expected difficulties smoothed themselves away, while others, scarcely anticipated, came into prominence. Most notable of all, the physical likeness between himself and Chilcote, the bedrock of the whole scheme, which had been counted upon to offer most danger, worked without a hitch. He stood literally amazed before the sweeping credulity that met him on every hand. Men who had known Chilcote from his youth, servants who had been in his employment for years, joined issue in the unquestioning acceptance. At times the ease of the deception bewildered him; there were moments when he realized that, should circumstances force him to a declaration of the truth, he would not be believed. Human nature prefers its own eyesight to the testimony of any man.

But in face of this astonishing success he steered a steady course. In the first exhilaration of Fraide's favor, in the first egotistical wish to break down Eve's scepticism, he might possibly have plunged into the vortex of action, let it be in what direction it might; but fortunately for himself, for Chilcote, and for their scheme, he was liable to strenuous second thoughts—those wise and necessary curbs that go further to the steadying of the universe than the universe guesses. Sitting in the quiet of the House, on the same day that he had spoken with Eve on the Terrace, he had weighed possibilities slowly and cautiously. Impressed to the full by the atmosphere of the place that in his eyes could never lack character, however dull its momentary business, however prosy the voice that filled it, he had sifted impulse from expedience, as only a man who has lived within himself can sift and distinguish. And at the close of that first day his program had been formed. There must be no rush, no headlong plunge, he had decided; things must work round. It was his first expedition into the new country, and it lay with fate to say whether it would be his last.

He had been leaning back in his seat, his eyes on the ministers opposite, his arms folded in imitation of Chilcote's most natural attitude, when this final speculation had come to him; and as it came his lips had tightened for a moment and his face become hard and cold. It is an unpleasant thing when a man first unconsciously reckons on the weakness of another, and the look that expresses the idea is not good to see. He had stirred uneasily; then his lips had closed again. He was tenacious by nature, and by nature intolerant of weakness. At the first suggestion of reckoning upon Chilcote's lapses, his mind had drawn back in disgust; but as the thought came again the disgust had lessened.

In a week—two weeks, perhaps—Chilcote would reclaim his place. Then would begin the routine of the affair. Chilcote, fresh from indulgence and freedom would find his obligations a thousand times more irksome than before; he could struggle for a time; then—

A shadowy smile had touched Loder's lips as the idea formed itself.

The other contract, made in December, 1922, creates an indebtedness of $66,000.00, and of this $50,000.00 and interest is made payable in future years. We contend that both contracts are void upon the face, being in contravention of the express provision of the constitution.

YOUTH

Youth and pure and merry hearts,
These the greatest treasures;
All the magic, all the arts,
All the dreamed of pleasures
Are as nothing thee beside,
Tread your pompous measures
Fame and majesty and pride,
What know ye of treasures?

All the pomp of lords and kings,
All the lore of sages,
These are vain and worthless things
With the flight of ages;
In the graves where ye belong
Where is aught of laughter?
Youth, come forth and pipe a song,
Gladness coming after.

Youth and pure and merry hearts,
Long and long abide thee.
All the lure of shops and marts
Are as naught beside thee.
Fleet of limb and light of heart,
Joy beyond the measure,
Who hath knowledge, who hath art
To find such a treasure?

Who hath riches but would pay
All he hath to buy thee;
And a king I saw today
With his envy eye thee.
Merry youth with piping song,
Joy without the measure,
All the way of life along
Thine the chiefest treasure.

CARBON BRIQUETS PASS HIGH TEST

Los Angeles Gas Co. Engineers Make Careful Analysis

One of the most exhaustive tests ever conducted in connection with a fuel for the home and elsewhere has just been completed by the engineering department of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric corporation, and as a result it has been definitely ascertained that carbon briquets, which are manufactured by this concern, are the highest type of fuel on the market today, according to Vice President Vance of that organization.

During the past season every conceivable experiment and demonstration was made with briquets and as a result of this the corporation has announced them equal to any fuel on the market today.

Used in the open fireplace, or in the inclosed stove of any make, or in the kitchen stove, they have made good and have been found easy to ignite and capable of a heat that is not excelled by any other fuel now in use. The briquets are being handled direct from the gas corporation to the consumer, without a middleman.

This means that it is possible to purchase the briquets in Glendale at a price never before possible. The supply is equal to the demand, though the demand has exceeded the highest hopes of the briquet department, where R. B. Moore is in charge and where trucks and men are kept busy from early morning until night sacking and delivering the cylindrical fuel which is so easy to handle and so profitable to use.

"When the public desired to know just what the carbon briquet would do," said Mr. Vance, "we ordered our research department to make tests which took our men to the high Sierras, and compelled us to burn the briquets under the severest of conditions. We did not hesitate at anything. There was no pet proposition and no easy demonstration.

"Engineers who know how to get the best out of what is given to them undertook to make the completest of tests, and, as a result, we do not hesitate to recommend the carbon briquets as the best solid fuel now on the market. That is why our sales have been so remarkable and why we do not hesitate to say we have a fuel the equal of which is hard to find."
